Planters Call for Chinese Cheap Labor.

RENO SECURES THE PUBLIC EYE AGAIN

Burlington & Quincy Railroad Fighting the Union Pacific's Traffic—Minor Notes.

SPECIAL DISPATCHES TO THE OREGONIAN

[illegible] Sept. 11—A late copy of the Meridian [illegible] Mercury, says Labor is th[illegible] labor The [illegible] of the south, and cheap labor [illegible] introduced here, will hire out as [illegible] hire it cheap If he don't work as fast as [illegible] he works with more persistency and [illegible] time on his Josh house than the negro at [illegible] holidays, excursions and frolics [illegible] and will accomplish as much in cultivation [illegible] crops. What has raised such a [illegible] against the Chinamen on the Pacific [illegible] recommendation Certainly he can be [illegible] work continuously and cheaply It is [illegible] fact that he never participates in political affairs, and will never be clamoring [illegible] the ballot and never be making a disturbance [illegible] there was not a full vote, free ballot [illegible] count. Your European is certain to wish to [illegible] to enjoy the free privileges which [illegible] of the strong inducements for his im[illegible] and will be very apt to get in some [illegible] an election at the south as he is now [illegible] The foreign element now has much [illegible] party politics and party platforms [illegible] trouble to the native element in [illegible] it as a fact, without say[illegible] European influence is for good or evil [illegible] endangers the hold of the republi[illegible] their long lease of power and we [illegible] to their credit On the con[illegible] will be no political factor at all [illegible] concern on account of political [illegible] outcome of elections He will only [illegible] May be you can't pay him as [illegible] the negro in chips and whetstones [illegible] Chinese labor will have a [illegible] negro laborers and make them [illegible] As a laborer the Chi[illegible] contract to labor for you and is [illegible] if you comply with your con[illegible] in accordance with the stipulation [illegible] fact the negro is bound to be dis[illegible] and any event. Now we assume and [illegible] the great majority of Mississip[illegible] the legislative plan for securing [illegible] actuated by a thought and wish for [illegible] cheaper labor, and why not bring

The Tariff Commission.

THE TRIAL OVER.

Peck and [illegible] Acquitted Minor and [illegible] Convicted and no Agreement as to the Others

SPECIAL DISPATCHES TO THE OREGONIAN

WASHINGTON, Sept [illegible]

[illegible]

Foreman Dickson—The jury have [illegible]

The Court—The court cannot [illegible]. If the jury are still in darkness as to any question of law the court will with pleasure try to enlighten them

Foreman Dickson—We have fully discussed every point presented by your honor as to the law of conspiracy and facts as presented by evidence

Juror McNally—I am firm in my conviction and nothing can alter it

The Court—None of you are authorized to make a statement now

After a discussion with some deliberation the court said: "You have discussed the whole case and I have no doubt you have been deliberating but you have not reached a conclusion as to the whole case It is in the power of the court to accept such a verdict as you are prepared to render now but the importance of the issue the great amount of labor and money and time expended in the trial of this cause, renders it very important that if possible you should render a complete verdict as to the whole of the defendants I do not wish to give you binding instructions even as to that but I will try you once more

Foreman Dickson resignedly We obey with respectful submission to the court

The court stated he did not wish to be understood by his last remark as promising a discharge of the jury at 3 o'clock

At 2:05 P M the jury entered and through the foreman reported they were unable to agree The court stated it had come to the conclusion to accept the partial verdict and the roll of defendants was called and all answered "here" The jury then rendered a verdict of acquittal as to Turner and Peck and guilty as to Minor and Reredell As to the others they were unable to agree

On the objection of Merrick that Peck had not been arraigned and consequently could not be included in the verdict, the foreman repeated the report as to others, but left out the name of Peck The jury were then discharged and Henkle and Williams for Minor and Reredell, respectively moved arrest of judgment and for a new trial

After an angry passage between Ingersoll and Merrick and earnest statements on both sides with the intent to probe the alleged attempt at bribery to the bottom, court adjourned until Wednesday when arguments on the motion to arrest judgment will be heard

One of the jurors says as to all defendants with the exception of Turner, the vote stood for conviction 8 acquittal 4 On the final ballot the vote stood as to Brady, conviction 10 acquittal 2 the vote as to S. W. Dorsey stood 9 for conviction 3 for acquittal vote as to J. W. Dorsey, conviction 10 acquittal 2 vote as to Vail conviction 11 acquittal 1

CRIMINAL NOTES.

CHICAGO Sept 11—Times special A masked mob from the country gathered at Washington Indiana early Sunday morning with the intention of lynching John Hunter, who murdered William Leuts The sheriff had quietly garrisoned the jail with 30 armed men The vigilantes displaced the ropes of the fire and police bells, fired volleys to frighten the citizens and sent 50 men over the jail fence Three attempts to force the doors were unavailing, and the appeals of the sheriff and prosecuting attorney caused the mob to disperse Hunter lay crouched in the cell all day

Sam Hazel, for the wanton brutal murder of Mollie Dakon, a five year old girl of Jonesboro, Ill got 99 years in the penitentiary

Declares his Innocence.

CHICAGO, Sept 10—James Tracy convicted of the murder of Huebner, and who has been supposed to be one of the scum of society has written a long full statement declaring his innocence The statement is clear, compact, logical and ably framed He wrote it off hand with a reporter by his side, and it makes a remarkable contribution to criminal literature It starts out with these words "On making this, my last appeal for public sympathy, I feel the shadow of the gallows resting on my head Many reporters have said I will die game I shall die asserting my innocence I may not protest any affected sentiment of remorse or hopes of forgiveness but I am not going to death with the desperate resolve which usually characterizes the common murderer I feel my situation keenly I dread the disgrace and ignominy of the gallows but I do not fear to die

After reviewing his life and the testimony against him, and showing that of late his life had been blameless, he concludes

"I only ask finally that my motives may not be imputed to ruffianly stubbornness, or villainous depredation If I am obliged to die I will die like a man who maintains his innocence die because the world rejects him

Tracy is to be hanged next Friday unless reprieved

A Penitentiary War.

JERSEY CITY, Sept. 11—The penitentiary at Snake Hill is in a state of siege, rival wardens claiming possession Warden Meehan who holds the fort, has closed the gates and no person can enter or leave Warden Bourne has secured a warrant for the arrest of Meehan but it can not be served A number of constables determined to-day to effect an entrance, arrest Meehan and take possession for Bourne but one of them used the telephone to inform the men holding the penitentiary, and the plan failed When the gates closed one prisoner, a mail carrier, was outside the walls of the penitentiary and there he is still Attempted Robbery.

DES MOINES Sept 10—Henry S Scribner, an old man brother of the New York publisher, was assaulted by roughs Friday night, who attempted robbery, but failed. Scribner's death is imminent The perpetrators escaped. It is a coincidence that Dr Shaffer, of Keokuk, was recently knocked down and robbed on the same spot, and when found made the same pleading remark, "Don't hurt me any more Crimes of this class are becoming frequent and the citizens contemplate a mass meeting to organize a vigilance committee to take the place of insufficient city authorities

Stage Robbery

ST LOUIS, Sept 11—A stage coach which runs between Seligman on the St. Louis & San Francisco railroad and Eureka Springs, Arkansas was stopped last evening by two masked men heavily armed and the ten passengers in the stage robbed of about $900 and considerable jewelry The mail pouch was also robbed of registered letters No clue to the robbers

A Suicide's Story.

CHICAGO, Sept. 11.—A young woman claiming to be a niece of Roscoe Conkling, has twice tried to commit suicide within the past 48 hours but ineffectually She says the stony heart of her distinguished relative in refusing to aid her to get a position is the cause of her attempts Her story is not much credited Millionaire's Son in Trouble.

SPECIAL DISPATCHES TO THE OREGONIAN

[illegible]

The Maine Election

[illegible]

At Calais the election is progressing quietly with a full vote [illegible] will carry the [illegible] majority

At Damariscotta many greenbackers are voting the straight republican ticket

Dexter reports a gain for republicans

At Gardiner a full vote will be polled At 1 P M indications is voting is nearly two to one in favor of Robie Republicans will probably lose a representative to the legislature although there is strong opposition

At Houlton indications point to a republican gain of 400 in the county

LEWISTON Sept 11—The vote stood at 1 P M Robie 1042 Plaisted 865

AUBURN, Sept 11—Four down town wards show Robie 734 Plaisted 577

BELFAST Sept 11—The contest is very animated here and a larger vote polled than ever before Republicans are gaining largely

BIDDEFORD Sept 11—Up to noon only about one third the total vote was thrown The vote between Plaisted and Robie is very close very few straight greenback, independent or temperance votes being cast

BRUNSWICK Sept 11—Voting is progressing quietly Indications are that an average vote will be thrown with very little gain by either party

AUGUSTA Sept 11—The election here will go quite heavy for republicans They are sweeping every ward at the rate of two to one largely increasing their majority of 1880 Independent and straight greenback vote is heavy

11 P M—Portland vote (official) excepting Island vote not received Robie, rep, 3277, Plaisted, fusion 3010 Chase greenback 27 Vinton ind rep 23 scattering 7 Robie's plurality [illegible] against [illegible] in 1880

MIDNIGHT—Fifty towns give Robie 14,851 Plaisted 11,974 Chase 181 Vinton, [illegible] scattering [illegible] against in 1880, Davis, [illegible] Plaisted 13,380 Nye, 109 scattering 24 Robie's plurality [illegible] against [illegible] in 1880 a republican gain of 1093

PORTLAND Sept 12—2 A M—One hundred towns give Robie 21,248 Plaisted 22,376, Chase 311 Vinton, 112 scattering 72 Robie's plurality [illegible] republican gain, 2708

The Pennsylvania Quarrel

PHILADELPHIA Sept 11—A very interesting bit of political news has leaked out Men who have been leaders of the republican party have concluded that Beaver is hopelessly beaten for governor Gov Hoyt has been in town talking over the situation with Matthew S Quay who has been heretofore the organizer of the Cameron forces, and both these gentlemen have told their friends that Beaver's canvass has proved a failure and that he has no chance for election Gov Hoyt was heard to say emphatically that on election day Beaver wouldn't even be in the field There is a plan on foot with which Hoyt is in sympathy, to withdraw Beaver and put up a new ticket which the independents can support A conference of [illegible] is to be held for that purpose to-morrow The idea is to have the independent ticket withdrawn to throw Don Cameron overboard and make a new ticket in which his wishes shall be entirely ignored Both Hoyt and Quay are secretly rejoicing at the sure defeat of Beaver as ensuring an early downfall of Cameron and although they came out into the movement actively they are not [illegible] favor a new ticket But there is not one chance in a hundred that anything can be done There is no power to decapitate Beaver to begin with, as Beaver said no later than yesterday he was bound to fight it out He had been duly nominated and would not withdraw under any circumstances even if both tickets could be taken down There would not be time for a new convention and even if a new ticket were put up it would not be elected for rather than be thrown overboard, Cameron would throw his influence to the democrats and elect Pattison The fight stands in just this way Cameron has made Beaver his personal candidate and has made an issue on him. This is a life and death struggle and he will keep Beaver in the field and the thousands of dollars already collected will be used lavishly He will thus stand at the helm and sink or swim with the ship If Pattison is elected he would still retain a portion of the republican party With Beaver out of the way and a new ticket in the field he would find himself without any following whatever He prefers therefore to take his chances with Beaver, and will defeat any efforts at a new ticket Therefore it does not seem possible there can be a new ticket Mr McKee the independents chairman says the independents are satisfied with the situation and no compromise short of an unconditional surrender will be listened to If the stalwarts want to elect a republican ticket they must vote for Stewart The campaign begins in earnest this week Heretofore Beaver has had it all his own way and been ranting all over the state Now he must contend with Stewart and Pattison Gov Hoyt's prophecy of Beaver's defeat is evidently correct The stalwart chairman, Cooper, having failed to capture the labor convention, has failed to purchase the thirty thousand Irish and land league votes that were bargained for, and has the rapidly increasing independent army staring him in the face To-day the election of Pattison is as sure as anything can be in politics

The Independent Movement.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept 10—A gentleman well informed in regard to what is transpiring in political circles, says it has been an open secret for six months that the movements of the independent republicans have been largely directed by Wharton Barker In January, at the assembly building he had declared with very great earnestness that Cameron and Cameron's methods must be put aside and we must have a free party In March his letter to Senator Mitchell and reply of the senator again called attention to the danger to the republican party should Cameron be longer permitted to insult the people and in April at Barker's office Senator Mitchell met many influential citizens and the results of the meeting were the Continental hotel conference of May 1 and the Philadelphia convention of May 24 From these facts and from the fact that Barker is chairman of the independent advisory board for conducting the campaign much interest attaches to the meetings known to have been held at his office the past week There can no longer be any doubt that the stalwarts have confessed their weakness and have proposed withdrawal of the Cameron Beaver ticket and a meeting of citizens will be held at the office of John Welsh some time on Monday to arrange a plan to unite the Republican party The independents have from the first demanded withdrawal of the Cameron ticket the adoption of party rules which shall insure a free party and civil service reform which shall give the tenure of office for life to faithful public officers and there can be no question that their present demands will be imperative on these subjects Mr Barker's management of the campaign so far has been aggressive capable of convincing and no alarm need be had lest the bosses under direction of Cameron should get the better of the independents at any point The political movements of next week will command national as well as state attention for the independents are making the battle [illegible]

Trying to Compromise.

PHILADELPHIA Sept 11—An important meeting was held to-day by leading republicans for the purpose of taking steps to secure the withdrawal of both Beaver and Stewart and the selection of a candidate for governor for both factions Present John Welsh Thomas Cochrane [illegible] Joseph Wharton and Edwin N Benson It is said a letter will be formulated and addressed to both candidates asking them for the good of the party to withdraw

Fire at Columbia.

COLUMBIA Sept 10—A fire this morning at the China theatre burned nine houses all occupied by Chinamen Loss about $5000, no insurance Ernest Hinkleman member of the engine company was run over by the hose carriage and severely injured

Burning of California Iron Works.

AUBURN, Sept 11—Last night the smelting works of the California Iron Co caught fire and were totally destroyed No one hurt Fire is supposed to have caught from gas escaping from the furnace The works cost about $150,000, and the loss will be very heavy

BY ATLANTIC CABLE.

London Paragraphs.

NEW YORK, Sep 10—The Tribune's London cable says Last week there was a meeting of Chinese merchants at which they determined to invite Chinese labor to England. This aroused indignation among certain organizations of the working classes and if Chinese are brought to the English labor market, there will certainly be serious trouble Iron and coal miners are preparing for a great strike in October which, if persisted in, will not be calculated to improve the workmen's position Recent benefits to employers are so doubtful or small that suspension of work may be a positive relief in accelerating the prices of material

Novelty Theater is approaching completion and shareholders have been promised special advantages for admission The commission will make the new pieces of new writers a feature of the management

SPECIAL DISPATCHES TO THE OREGONIAN

[illegible] Sept 10—[illegible] Pasha's [illegible] the English [illegible] until the English infantry [illegible] that the English right was attacked [illegible] five battalions of infantry with five guns and [illegible] cavalry under [illegible] Pasha The enemy had altogether 4,000 men [illegible] the enemy having disappeared [illegible] At daybreak Sunday the English [illegible] threw rifle pits [illegible] Kassassin [illegible] prevent Arabi Pasha [illegible] him near [illegible] 13th Bengal lancers charged a regiment of the enemy's cavalry [illegible] through them and killed ten [illegible] losing one [illegible] was subsequently discovered full of lance wounds The enemy threw many of their own wounded alive [illegible] the canal [illegible] guards have arrived at the front and stores are coming up fast The wounded are doing excellently Our loss during the engagement was fifty wounded and none killed

Col Pennington dismounted his men and opened a galling fire The three squadrons of cavalry advanced to surround him and being so hard pressed he mounted his men and charged the nearest body of the enemy with such fury [illegible] killed ten of them Soon the rest of the regiment four hundred strong, came to the rescue, and they found the picket of hussars with mounted infantry already posted side by side with the gallant party

A Flank Movement

ISMAILIA Sept 10—In the engagement yesterday besides Egyptians who advanced from Tel el Kebir a force of 1500 men crossed a desert from Salihiyeh and operated on the right flank of the British These troops continued the engagement after the Tel el Kebir force retired They had a Krupp battery which was handled well The British heavy cavalry pushed them hard and finally captured one Krupp gun with a team and equipments An Egyptian standard was taken from the hands of a dead standard bearer belonging to one of Arabi's crack regiments The Salihiyeh contingent were routed but the [illegible] reached Tel el Kebir in fairly good order The British loss is comparatively small perhaps 60 killed and wounded Arabi's plan was well devised but required better troops to carry it out The rebels fought better than they have heretofore

Gen Lowe's flank movement checked that of Arabi Pasha the active forward movement of the English infantry together with the superiority of the English artillery forcing the enemy's infantry to give way when the fight was virtually ended Eye witnesses of the battle state the enemy's fire was tremendous and wonder where their bullets can have gone

A Hard Fight.

KASSASSIN Sept 10—It was not through any fault of the rebel leaders that the attack yesterday by Arabi Pasha was unsuccessful For a quarter of an hour the position of the English force and camp looked exceedingly critical as the infantry were in danger of being outflanked The commanding positions were all in the enemy's hands, while line after line of his cavalry and infantry were seen crossing the sand hills General Lowe came to the relief of the British infantry with a cavalry force and threatening their [illegible] forced him to desist from continuing his flanking movements The rebel cavalry fell back and for half an hour each endeavored to get round the other When the enemy saw their guns taken they halted and made a show of advance, as if to recapture them but a volley from the marines dissipated the idea, and they continued their retreat

General War Notes.

KASSASSIN, Sept 11—There is little [illegible] that the first attack of Saturday came upon us [illegible] of a surprise. About 4 30 Bengal lancers, who were [illegible] vedettes to their astonishment found themselves suddenly in the presence of three squadrons of the enemy's cavalry and a number of infantry advancing in regular attack formation

ALEXANDRIA Sept 11—A regiment at Mandara is prepared to desert at the earliest opportunity

The firing heard last week behind the enemy's position which caused the supposition that dissensions had broken out in camp arose from the active drilling and firing practice of new levies

Arabi Pasha has been at Tel el Kebir since the 25th of August

ALEXANDRIA Sept 10—In the last two days unusual movements have been observed in the rebel camp

Heavy cannonading to-day in the direction of Aboukir and Mirut

General Wolseley and staff yesterday reconnoitered the coast from Ramleh to Aboukir in a steam barge

Deaths from Sunstroke.

ISMAILIA Sept 10—The Highland brigade which left Saturday only advanced ten miles The weather is extremely hot and the men suffer terribly Two of them died from sunstroke and a few others are not expected to live Two hundred men fell out of the ranks during Saturday's march

The Egyptians from Kafr el Dwar appear to have brought up one or two mortars of heavy calibre The fire from them however is so inaccurate that they are practically inoffensive

Notes from the Front.

KASSASSIN Sept 10—It is learned from prisoners taken in Saturday's engagement that Ali Pasha Fehmi led the attack of the enemy

Two wounded British soldiers have died

ALEXANDRIA, Sept 10—One of the officers who surrendered at Ramleh states that the dissension in the Aboukir garrison consists in the refusal of 2000 raw recruits to be drilled

A Mistaken Idea.

KASSASSIN Sept 11—Prisoners report the object of Saturday's operations was the capture of Kassassin which it was believed would be weakly defended The Egyptians lost over 100 killed and the number of wounded is unknown

No Move Ahead.

ISMAILIA Sept 11—Midnight Sunday—We have not yet advanced beyond a ridge two miles north of Kassassin but our outposts have been doubled and supported by infantry

EDUCATIONAL.

ST. HELEN'S HALL,
ART DEPARTMENT.
THE CORPS OF TEACHERS LONG ENGAGED in St Helen's Hall has just been reinforced by the addition of six new teachers, five of them from prominent educational institutions of the Eastern States. Two of these are engaged in the Musical Department, three in the English, and one (MISS FULLICK) in the Art Department.
MISS FULLICK is a lady of English birth, but educated in this country. She was graduated at Vassar College, and has since spent much time in the best private Studios in the Eastern States. She comes with the highest recommendations for her attainments and skill as a teacher of Painting and Drawing. These cover the whole ground of instruction in the best Art Schools, embracing Oil Painting in Landscape, Flower and Still-life Studies; Crayon, Charcoal, Water Colors, Pencil, Pen and Ink, and Decorative Art in all its branches.
MISS FULLICK is a lady of liberal education and superior culture, and the Rector and Principal of St. Helen's Hall recommend this department of their school to its patrons with entire confidence, being well assured that it was never under a more competent instructor, or one of more varied acquirements.

TUESDAY MORNING, SEPT. 12, 1882.

LEGISLATIVE DUTY.

In some cases it has been a source of relief to the people of Oregon when the legislature adjourned. Nor has it ever been a matter of congratulation with them that it was about to convene. At each session there has been more or less jobbery either accomplished or attempted, and the people who foot the bills regard the meeting of this body with a sort of dread, lest some huge job should be perpetrated in the name of law. Hitherto, however, with a few notable exceptions, nothing of the kind has been successful on a very large scale. The greatest detriment to the people has been in matters small in themselves, but the aggregate of which has been great. Many a small hole has been made in the treasury, out of which is constantly leaking some of the people's money. The main trouble has been that the legislature has ignored the existence of these innumerable small leaks, and at each successive session has furnished additional chances, under the guise of new laws, for others of the same character. Only now and then, when such a gigantic raid is made on the treasury as the once notorious lock and dam bill, do the people exhibit a general alarm at what the legislature does, but the effect of mislegislation is nevertheless continually felt. One good result of the senatorial contest is, that it leaves the two houses less time to pass bad laws. We might cite many instances in which mistakes have been made by unfledged statesmen, who by some dispensation had the fortune to be chosen as members of the legislature, and who have seemed to feel that they had a special mission to give the people a new code of laws and were endued with that wisdom which peculiarly fitted them for this mission, and that they could devise laws which were much better than those under which the people had lived and prospered for years. They have even gone to the extent of setting up their opinions upon political economy in contradiction to principles of law which have received the sanction of ages as emanations of the wisest and best statesmen and law givers of all ages. Imperfections in all human laws are inevitable and in many of these laws, they are abundant. It is, however, better for the community that slight faultiness in this respect be endured, than that constant changes be made, involving confusion and uncertainty and detracting from the veneration which law should command. Numerous amendments have been made to the Oregon code since it was first framed and adopted, but it is exceedingly doubtful if, upon the whole, it is better adapted to the requirements of the people, whether it more fully secures their rights or remedies their wrongs, now than as it was originally framed. Continual tinkering at it by inexperienced hands has rather enhanced its defectiveness, and some improvement might possibly be made by repealing all the amendments which have been made to this code. Not that such a general repeal would be advisable, for some of the changes which have been made have been rendered necessary by the change of circumstances, the growth and development of the state and the transition from the condition of a pioneer people to that of members of a great commonwealth, largely cosmopolitan in the character of its citizens and general in the extent and variety of their business pursuits and relations. The present legislature being, as we believe, composed of as intelligent a class of men as ever met for similar purposes in any state, ought to guard with care against hasty and ill-advised innovations upon our system of law. We have seen as a people ample illustration of the fact that it is not by the multiplicity of legal enactments the interests of the people, the demands of justice and the general welfare are best subserved, but by the selection of men to execute the law who are faithful, efficient, honest and impartial. There are many things that justify the poet's line that that is the best government which is best administered.

Let a man of broad views, of good moral character, of ability, integrity and honesty, be chosen as senator. Let the present fairly prosperous condition of the public finances be guarded and fostered; let the spirit of economy, but not niggardness, be displayed; let all sections be fairly treated; let all expenditures of the people's money be ordered in the people's interests, and not at the instigation of corrupt lobbyists for personal profit. Let the changes in our general laws be as few as possible, to adapt them more fully to the wants of our advanced statehood, and let these changes be advisedly and carefully made. And when the forty days of the session are ended the members can return to their constituents and receive their "well done," besides standing a good chance of being talked of as candidates for a second term.

NEW PILOTAGE BILL.

For years past the board of trade of this city and all shipping and mercantile interests have made efforts to secure a divorcement of the towage and the pilotage laws which, in the period of Oregon's infancy in commerce, were framed together to protect the capital invested in an enterprise at that time exceedingly venturesome. The commerce of the Columbia river has reached such proportions that the profits on the investment are very large. Having a monopoly of the business, the owner of the tugs and the pilots at times fixed exorbitant rates for towing. When pilots, in opposition to this enterprise, entered the field, he arbitrarily refused to tow such vessels as took on board pilots not in his employ. His extortion and dog-in-the-manger-like conduct took money from every wheat grower in Oregon and Washington, in the shape of increased freight charges.

One branch of the outrage will soon be checked. Through the efforts of the board of trade there was formed in this city a joint stock company which bought the most powerful and best equipped tug boat obtainable on the Atlantic seaboard. The tug is expected to arrive within a month and to immediately go into service on the Columbia river bar. That extortion in the matter of towage will never again be heard of, we are assured.

To secure a better system of pilotage, in fact the very best system, the board of trade several months ago engaged the services of a prominent law firm who have prepared a bill which will be introduced in the legislature this week. Following are the principal provisions of the bill:

The limits of the bay and river pilot ground are clearly defined.

A board of three pilot commissioners is provided for. They are each to serve three years, at an annual salary of $300 and are to have a secretary with a salary of $600 per annum. One of the commissioners is to be appointed by the governor of the state, one by the board of trade of Portland and one by the chamber of commerce of Astoria. This provision is similar to the law of other states where the pilot commissioners are named by the mercantile bodies and ensures the election of good men for the positions.

The commissioners may be removed from office if they prove incompetent or neglect to discharge their duties faithfully. The board is given full power to summon witnesses and to conduct all examinations necessary to the success of their work. The secretary is required to attend to all business of the board, take charge of its finances and keep a record of the commerce of the Columbia river. He is required to give bonds in the sum of $3000.

The board has power to examine and license pilots for the bar and river; to hear and determine complaints against any of the pilots. The pilots are required to pay to the board five per centum out of their earnings, out of which money all expenses of the board, including the salaries of the commissioners and secretary, are to be paid. This provision makes the system self-sustaining and saves the taxpayers of the state the expense heretofore incurred for this purpose. The board may make all proper rules for the government of the pilots, and may fine any pilot for violation of the laws. The board is required to make a full report of all its proceedings to the governor by the first of August of each year.

Pilots applying for a license are to be carefully examined, and if found qualified by the board, are to be licensed for one year, which license is to be renewed, of course, unless the pilot proves unworthy or inefficient. The board may revoke the license of any pilot who is found unfit for his duties, after he has had a hearing before them.

A pilot must be an American citizen, 21 years of age and well skilled in his profession; and in case of a bar pilot he must be attached to a pilot boat. Each pilot must give bonds in the sum of $5000 to the state, which bond shall be liable to make good any damages any vessel may suffer in consequence of his fault or negligence.

The bar pilots are required to keep a pilot boat cruising upon or outside of the bar to supply pilots to vessels bound in.

The pilots may take charge of any vessel over 25 tons burden not exempt from compulsory pilotage.

In the following cases vessels are exempt from compulsory pilotage:

1. A vessel in tow of a steam tug anywhere on the "river" pilot ground.

2. A vessel engaged in the whaling or fishing trade.

3. A vessel licensed or engaged exclusively in the coasting trade between the Columbia river and any port on the Pacific coast.

The rates of pilotage are as follows: From without the bar to Astoria, $6 per foot for the first 12 feet, and $8 for each additional foot of the vessel's draft; from below Sand Island to Astoria, half the above; from Sand island, one-quarter of the same. On outward bound vessels from Astoria to the sea, $5 00 for the first twelve feet and $7 00 for each additional foot. Between the last day of October and the first day of April, the pilot shall receive the sum of $10 00 in addition to the above compensation. River pilotage shall be $1 00 per foot, the same as at present. There are provisions for paying a pilot who shall be detained on a vessel or carried to sea. Bar pilots are required to speak all vessels in the order of their arrival, and bring them in, unless a vessel is in danger, in which case she shall be first cared for. The same pilot who brings a vessel in is to take her out, unless the board, for good cause, allows the captain to employ another. Pilots are required to report all their business to the board once a month, including a statement of their earnings and the vessels piloted. The pilot boats are required to carry a supply of water and provisions, and to afford all possible aid to vessels in distress. Neither of the commissioners, nor the secretary is allowed to own any interest in any pilot boat or steam tug.

All laws now in force on the subject of pilotage or towage are to be repealed.

The passage of a law which will establish a better system of pilotage must work good to every citizen of the state, except those who extort from the merchant marine. No argument can be made with reason against such a law.

The census reports are at last actually under way, and will fill thirty large volumes. From the progress thus far made it appears that the time will come for another census before the results of that last taken are before the public. That facts ascertained by government authority in 1880 should be still unattainable in 1882, does no credit to the gentlemen in charge of this great national undertaking. Yet in several instances recently, all that could be got from Washington was the information that the information wanted had not yet been obtained by collating the various local reports.

Linn county furnishes the "dark horse" in the senatorial contest in the person of one Forbes, a Lebanon hotel clerk, who supports his claim to this distinction by retiring in a "perturbed state of mind" from the parlor after a stormy interview with "wife No. 1," and puzzles his brain for "explanations" that would clear his record to the satisfaction of "wife No. 2." Not having been sufficiently thoughtful to travel under an alias, he was easily discovered, and an exchange deems his chances for the U. S. senate good.

THE NEXT SENATOR.

What the People of Oregon Demand from the Man Whom They Shall Send to the United States Senate.

The following leading editorial from the Corvallis Gazette is calm and dispassionate, and truthfully represents the feeling throughout the state with regard to the United States senatorship from Oregon:

Before another issue of this paper appears the Oregon legislature of 1882 will have convened and questions momentous to us all, and some of interest to the United States at large, will arise for determination and settlement. From the tone of the press generally for the past few weeks it would seem that the chief question deemed of importance is the election of United States senator. We do not disguise our own feeling in this matter—namely, that the choice of the Oregon legislature should fall on one combining many requisites. First, he should be a republican of undoubted consistency. We name the republicanism first, because many a man can be found, we are thankful to say, possessing other needful qualities, so the republican majority has the right and duty of selecting one in full sympathy with the principles of the great party to which we are proud to own allegiance. Next, his character for pure and honorable conduct in all departments of life, public and private, must be above reproach. Our legislators owe it to themselves and to their constituents, that none shall represent Oregon in congress whose doubtful antecedents need apology and explanation before the noblest and best of the senators there can shake him cordially by the hand. Moreover, his previous life must have proved his fitness to manage and govern men and affairs with honesty, wisdom and success. He must be independent in every sense, his inspiration must come from a real sense of duty to our state at large and not from a public or private retainer for any man, clique, ring, city or corporation. This independence, too, must be so true and complete that the people may rely on the new senator's influence on the filling of offices and appointments in the future being based on the fitness of the appointee for the office to be filled and not in payment of debts of gratitude for favors in the canvass now in full blast, and the public record of the man chosen as senator must faithfully agree with the professions he now makes. We put no truth in sudden conversions here. We have no faith that the election to the United States senate works a deep and abiding change in the inner nature, and life long conduct of a man. If a man be clever, plausible, insincere, accessible to influences, favorable to certain individual interests and enterprises, and to the general neglect of a duty to the state at large, corrupt or impure in life or manner, or recreant to political principles, that character, that history, he will carry with him to Washington if Salem lightning strikes him. The lives and characters of candidates before the people are all pretty well known. Newspaper praise and newspaper abuse would alike pass very lightly by the legislator who soberly and earnestly determined to do his duty by his country and by the state. Deeds not words should be the record to be consulted. If in the application of the principles here laid down it shall be found that J. N. Dolph, Geo. H. Williams, J. H. Mitchell, W. Lair Hill, B. P. Boise or any other candidates prominently spoken of, or who may hereafter be brought before the legislature for that important position, cannot stand the test, or if it is thought any of them if elected will not perform the duties of United States senator with equal justice to each and every portion of the state alike, most assuredly pass them by and seek some other material better adapted to perform the people's will. Let, at any rate, the Benton county members know and feel that for a bold and honest performance of their duty their constituents will hold them to a strict account, and will accept no apology on the ground of Portland or ring influence. The valley members have got to stand together, and acquit themselves like men. The valley has reason to-day to be proud of the members she is sending, for they are at least the equals in character, ability, and education of any whom they expect to meet. Let them insist in plain, thorough, courteous terms on their rightful share of power in the legislature, and they will get it this time, if they have never before attained it.

HIPPLE OR MITCHELL—WHICH?

CORVALLIS, Sept. 11.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE OREGONIAN:

It would seem that there is something in a name, and under the Oregon code no man or woman can have but one lawful patronymic name at a time. A woman may change hers by marriage or divorce, but a man can only change his in the manner pointed out in section 72, page 564 of the code, and in addition to the notice referred to in your article of the 9th inst: "The court shall also require public notice to be given of the change desired." Of course there could be no change if our J. H. Mitchell was decreed to be J. H. Mitchell. It follows that the individual that is just now aspiring to be the United States senator is not Mitchell, at all, at all, but the other fellow.

The next time the individual in question wants to change his name he had better employ some lawyer who understands at least the provisions of the code so that he can get a decree of the court that will accomplish the object desired. But what a commentary on common decency it is to try to elect a man to the United States senate who has found it necessary to change his name—lawfully or unlawfully. If you would ask the question of every man you meet in this broad land what he thought of a man who would come to Oregon and change his name, the almost universal censure would be: "He is a scoundrel."

Ross Challenges the World.

HALIFAX, Sept. 11.—Wallace Ross writes: "I am prepared to defend the title of champion which I now hold, by reason of Hanlan's reported failure to accept any challenge against any sculler, whether from Toronto or any part of the world, and open to a match under the usual championship conditions as to distance and amount of stakes, which Hanlan well knows, of 1000 pounds aside. I prefer to row Hanlan a race of this kind and as an inducement shall give the champion right to name the course and will allow of mutual agreement as to the water, the race to be rowed five weeks from date.

FROM THE CAPITAL.

[SPECIAL TELEGRAPHIC CORRESPONDENCE.]

SALEM, Sept. 11.—9 P. M.—The greater part of the forenoon to-day was spent in talk, and during the morning hours it seemed probable that organization would be delayed till to-morrow. About noon, however, members of the senate met in caucus, and Hirsch and Starkweather were named for president. Voorhees, of Marion, rose and said that he would not, under any circumstances, vote for Hirsch. As every vote was needed in organization, the republicans having but two majority, this fell like a wet blanket on Hirsch's hopes. After long discussion of the matter, Voorhees remained firm, and Hirsch was withdrawn and McConnell, of Yamhill, substituted, and the ballot resulted: McConnell, 10; Starkweather, 6. The caucus then proceeded to nominate the other officers, as appears in the telegraphic record of proceedings.

The house republican caucus met at 1:30. Gilbert was the only member of the Marion delegation present, the others remaining out on the ground that they did not propose to take part in any caucus and did not want to make a precedent. It was evident before the caucus that McBride would be nominated. He was understood on all hands to be unpledged and unattached to either the interest of Mitchell or the opposition. He took this stand publicly, saying that he did not consider himself the candidate of either faction, and wanted that fact distinctly understood. The first caucus ballot stood: McBride, 16; Gilbert, 9; Kelly, 2; Plummer, 1; blank, 2; and McBride was declared the candidate. Gilbert, his principal opponent, made a speech expressing good feeling at the result. The vote of the Multnomah delegation was divided between Plummer, Gilbert and McBride. The caucus then nominated the officers whose election is reported in the record of the proceedings.

A fine piece of parliamentary practice in the senate this evening took the organization out of the hands of Mitchell's friends. Before the adoption of the rules, Voorhees offered a resolution authorizing a committee to appoint standing committees, naming as such committee Starkweather, Davenport, Hall, Prim and Clow, the last two being democrats and the first two members of the opposition to Mitchell. It created a great sensation, and much sharp parliamentary play was made by the Mitchell people to defeat it, but the democrats voted solid with a few republicans, and the resolution finally passed by a vote of 20 to 10. All the democrats and Waldo, Voorhees, Davenport, Jessup, Starkweather and Humphreys voted aye. This takes all the organization out of the hands of McConnell.

Looking over the field to-night there is much to encourage the opponents of Mitchell. His partisans here loudly asserted that Hirsch would go in with a boom, and his defeat is a victory, made a decided triumph by the subsequent action regarding the appointment of committees. The opposition, of course, are elated, and the Mitchell people are very mad. The organization of the house has no political significance. While Mitchell's chances are failing it cannot be said that the chances of any other candidate are looking up. The explanation is that all of the field are working unitedly in the main fight to beat Mitchell, and they are working in earnest. I believe that Mitchell is beaten.

HE IS WONDERFUL! HE IS STRANGE!

He Tells Your Disease without Asking a Question!

Thousands flock to see this strange man. He has astonished the best talent by his great knowledge of the inner Man. Don't fail to be examined and find out without guess work what condition your Lungs are in, also the Heart, Liver, Kidneys and every part of the inside. It is worth a fortune to any one, for his examinations are really wonderful and give unbounded satisfaction to all.

DR. PERRY PRATT

The great American Herb Phenomenon. Men, women and children, if you are suffering go and see him.

HERBALISM

Is the oldest and grandest system of medical treatment in the world. It is the application of nature's simplest remedies for the removal of disorders set on by artificial life. It came in with Adam, and will go out with the last man. "And the fruit thereof shall be for meat and the leaf thereof shall be for medicine." Ezekiel 47th chapter 12th verse. When universally practised in this and other countries there was small loss of life and men lived as a rule their allotted time and even far beyond. Mercury and the Lancet causes more deaths in quiet sick beds than the sword and cannon on the field of battle. Reaction is taking place and common sense is asserting itself in the minds and conduct of the people, and the clever and accomplished herbalist becomes again the doctor for the million.

Asthma, Catarrh and Lung troubles cured by Dr. Perry Pratt astonished the best doctors in London and Paris, and yet he uses nothing but simple herbs. There is a disease which produces pains about the body that thousands of people treat for Rheumatism but are never cured. The pains occur about any part of the body, but are most apt to occur in one of the hip joints passing down the sciatic nerve; it is often called Sciatic Rheumatism. This disease affects the heart and the entire nerve system and is wasting and debilitating to the entire body. There is an absolute cure for this disease and those who may suffer in this respect will be informed of the cause of it and of its presence by an examination by Dr. Pratt, who, by an examination of the action of the heart will point out the disease without asking a question.

HO KEE PO KEE!

The most nutritious, strengthening and blood cleansing Restorative known, which combined with our Indian Herb Tea, is a sure remedy for Catarrh, Coughs, Influenza, Inflammation of Bowels and Bladder, Dysentery, Bilious Colic, Cholera Morbus, Colds, Fevers, Tape Worm, Chills and Fever, Dyspepsia, Debility, Loss of Appetite, Palpitation of the Heart, Neuralgia, Rheumatism and all diseases of the Blood, Liver and Stomach.

The Indian Herb Pad used in connection with Ho Kee Po Kee Herbs, have created intense excitement by the wonderful cures they have affected, reminding those who have used them of the best days of [illegible].

CALVARY CHURCH.

Laying of the Corner Stone of the New Presbyterian Edifice.

ADDRESS BY THE REV. A. L. LINDSLEY, D. D.

Sealed Box containing a History of the Foundling of the Church, and other articles pertaining to Portland and Oregon placed underneath the Stone with appropriate Ceremonies.

A large attendance of members and friends of the new Calvary Presbyterian church were present yesterday afternoon at the laying of the corner stone of their edifice, corner Ninth and Clay streets. The Christian ceremonies were observed, the Rev. E. Trumbull Lee officiating.

The services were opened by the singing of a hymn of praise, by the congregation, followed by the reading of the 132d psalm and prayer by the Rev. D. O. Ghormley.

THE ADDRESS.

Rev. A. L. Lindsley, D. D., then delivered the following address:

The question is pertinent, "What is the meaning of these ceremonies?" There is a two-fold meaning in the occasion which has brought us together to-day and on this ground.

I. The first is, to give a united expression to our purpose to erect here a house for the worship of the only true God, our Father, Redeemer and Sanctifier.

II. And the second is to give expression to our belief, that this Triune God will here manifest his purpose to meet with his church, called his household, to build them up on the foundation of their most holy faith—as God hath said, I will dwell in them, and walk in them, and I will be their God and they shall be my people. It is scarcely necessary to remark that it is indispensable to provide a building suitable for God to carry out his most glorious and beneficent purposes. For within his sanctuary, around his altars, his purpose and ours meet, the divine and human find expression and become one. Admitting these simple statements, it is impossible to attach an undue importance to the erection of houses of worship. From the most ancient times we learn that temples were the first structures ever erected upon the surface of the earth that deserved the name of edifices.

The state erects her palaces and capitols. Education, science and art build structures for the promotion of their ends and aims. Wealth lays the foundations of her treasure-houses, and commerce stores her precious things within substantial walls. Indeed, so common and so numerous are these facts in man's history that they are used as illustrations of the leading aims of men. One lays the foundations of his fortune, another of his family, and another of character. And shall not the strongest sentiment that actuates the human breast find expression in a similar way.

There is in man a religious nature which impels him to acts of reverence, adoration and obedience towards the invisible power that reigns supreme throughout all worlds and all duration. And shall not we, who know the only true God and Jesus Christ whom he hath sent, lay the foundation of our altar upon the earth which he hath made, and the foundation of our hopes in the eternal covenant which he hath proclaimed?

We hereby give expression not to one sentiment only, though it be superb and supreme. Christianity embraces all the true sentiments and all the lawful interests of mankind. It holds them all together in genial bond and sympathy, and it aims to promote them all in just proportion and with the highest success consistent with our nature and the end for which we were created.

Besides the supreme purpose for which such a structure is demanded, it is also indispensable for the culture of the humane and social sentiments of our race. As religion is man's chief concern, and as the founder of Christianity is set before us as the bright ideal and the spotless example of perfection, the culture of our whole complex nature, intellectual, moral and spiritual, should be carried on together under the comprehensive teachings which God our Father hath provided for us in the gospel of his Son, that we may grow up into the fullness of the stature of the perfection which is in Christ Jesus.

Our corner-stone is no visionary thing, contrived by human speculation or philosophy. It is as real as the life and teachings, the death and resurrection of our Lord. And the house itself from foundation to spire pointing toward heaven is a prophecy of His coming. With such views we adopt with our heart's assent and our loftiest hope the declaration of Holy Writ, "Other foundation can no man lay than that is laid which is Jesus Christ." This is the corner stone of the sanctuary about to be erected here. It is to be God's house; and therefore it shall be a house of prayer for all nations. It is to be built by a branch of the great household of faith, which is known by the name Presbyterian, deriving its title from the New Testament, and tracing its history back through battlefields and martyr fires, to Christ and his apostles; A branch of the church Universal and Apostolic, ever known by her protest by mouth and pen and sword against tyranny; ever lifting up her voice for the church's independence and the rights of conscience, and thereby becoming in all lands the founder of "The church without a prelate,

And the state without a king."

Ever teaching the law of God as the final standard of authority, and the Word of God as the only infallible guide of faith and practice; and in order to understand them requiring intelligent minds; and therefore ever the patron of learning and the founder of schools and colleges and universities, that have sent from their halls scholars, statesmen, authors, who have ruled in the realms of mind; ever the conservator of all that is true in science, all that is valuable in learning, all that is fair and permanent in art; ever leading the van or landing abreast of the foremost in the march of civilization; ever aiming to diffuse as widely as possible all these blessings and advantages; while maintaining that they are only parts, and subordinate parts of her great end and aim in this world. The Presbyterian branch of the holy blood-bought church, which teaches not part doctrines or pet doctrines, but ever putting the whole truth of God in actual movement before the eyes of the world—suppressing no truth, extenuating none, dictating none; but ever pressing all duty upon mind and heart and life, that God may be glorified and sinners saved. Holding the head with supreme loyalty, she feels beneath her feet the eternal rock of God's covenant, while she lifts her eyes to the heavens, looking for that blessed hope, even the glorious appearance of the great God and our Saviour Jesus Christ. Taking all the truth of God, she gains breadth of view and strength of purpose, and with sincere fraternal love fellowships all brethren in Christ of every name. Her liberality embraces all who hold the head, and with extended hands welcomes the whole world to tread her courts, to join their voices in her children's holy songs, and share with them in the hope of eternal life.

This branch of the church, catholic and apostolic, in the persons of a few of its ministers and members, lays the corner-stone of a new sanctuary.

Very briefly have we referred to its principles, its aspirations and its history to justify this step in the eyes of man.

How manifold are the responsibilities of the flock of Christ that shall gather within these walls! How bright their prospects, sustained by the prayers and the benefactions of numerous friends! May their best hopes be realized in the completion of the well-appointed and beautiful plan; and as we lay the corner-stone, may the angels come and watch over its progress, and at last lay the cap-stone shouting, Grace, grace unto it.

In anticipation of the glad event, and in harmony with the leading thoughts of this address, we send forward an apostolic greeting to the throngs that shall gather here:

"Now, therefore, ye are no more strangers and foreigners, but fellow-citizens with the saints, and of the household of God.

"And are built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ himself being the chief corner stone,

"In whom all the building fitly framed together, groweth unto an holy temple in the Lord.

In whom ye also are builded together, for an habitation of God through the Spirit." Amen.

CONTENTS OF THE BOX.

Mr. Wm. Wadhams then read a history of the church from its birth to the present date, which had been prepared by Dr. C. C. Strong. Lack of space prevents its publication in this issue, but it will be reserved for a future day. Mr. Wadhams also announced the contents of the tin box, to be placed in the hollow underneath the stone, which were as follows:

City Charter.
City Schools report of 1881.
Copies of the DAILY OREGONIAN of Feb. 20, July 17, and Sept. 11.
The Standard of Sept. 9.
The Telegram of Sept. 7.
The Willamette Farmer of Sept. 8.
Bound copy of the West Shore.
The invitation for the organization of the church.
Holy Bible.
Revised New Testament.
Photograph of the ground plan of the church.
Minutes of the trustees.
The church history.
History of the Sunday school.
List of subscribers to the church.
Two silver dollars of 1882.
Silver quarter-dollar of 1856.

The sealing of the stone was then performed by Dr Lindsley, after a few elegant remarks upon the ancient custom and the benefits which such custom had bestowed upon the researches into ancient history.

After the stone was laid, Dr. Lindsley offered a prayer, which was followed by the singing of the doxology and the benediction, by the Rev. E. Trumbull Lee.

CAUTION.—An agent is going the rounds with what purports to be a Pacific Coast Directory. It is simply a directory of towns along the coast, (seaport towns,) and does not include any of the interior. Business men of Portland and elsewhere are requested to examine the work before receiving it, when they will detect the discrepancy for themselves. McKenny's Pacific Coast Directory for 1883-4 will be delivered about the end of the present year.

W. O. Meyer, importer and breeder of Percheron horses, Shetland ponies and Jersey cattle, will be at the coming state fair, and has some promising colts sired by Arabian Boy, dams full blood Percheron mares, and others by full blood Percheron stallions. Also full and half blood Shetland colts for sale. Parties in want of the above stock can see Mr. M. and learn particulars.

PIANOS AND ORGANS.—Best in all essential points; prices very low; cash, installments or to rent with privilege to purchase; satisfaction given. Before purchasing elsewhere call on or address Minderhout & Co., at W. T. Shanahan's music and art gallery, Morrison street, near Second.

Taking the baby is an interesting event with young mothers. At Towne's gallery lately there has been an unusual rush of little ones and likewise of older people who sat and were duly pleased with the pictures. Take the little ones to-day.

THE AURORA RESTAURANT, on the fair grounds, will be conducted this season by Mr. Stephen Smith and Captain Will of Aurora. Both gentlemen are well known throughout the state and to fair visitors.

Garrison's Sewing Machine Store, 167 Third street, Portland, Jon B. Garrison, proprietor. Sewing Machines repaired on short notice and warranted. Needles, Oil, etc.

Smallpox may appear at any moment; be prepared and have your prescriptions filled at Dovan & Knight's Pharmacy, Morrison street, between Third and Fourth.

Frank M. Jackson, 159 First st, bet. Yamhill and Taylor, complete stock of jewelry, watches, clocks, spectacles and eyeglasses. San Francisco prices.

Store enlarged, repainted and refurnished for the immense stock to arrive. Mrs. Pilger's, 103 First—a fine establishment.

If you want to dance well this winter take a few lessons by the Frazer Chart System, over the Bank.

For the latest fashion papers and magazines go to the N. P. News Co., 147½ First street.

CRICKET MATCH AND DINNER.

Quite an interesting game took place on the East Portland ground Saturday. Wickets were pitched at 2 P. M., Messrs. Kinross and Warren captaining the respective sides with the following result:

Should the Saturday afternoon matches continue to be played with full teams and as good cricket shown as on last Saturday, our club cannot fail, by the time their new ground at City View Park is completed, to be a good match for any club on the Pacific Coast.

Mr. Rome, who has the remarkable score of 41 runs, is a recent acquisition from Victoria, and laid down his bat because he was worn out with running.

THE DINNER.

In the evening the annual meeting and dinner of the club took place at the St. George hotel. Covers were laid for thirty, and nearly that number were present. After the dinner, which was really excellent, had been enjoyed, and hungry cricketers can do justice to any meal, the customary toasts—the president and the queen—were drank, and the club elected the following officers for the ensuing year: President, W. H. Creighton; vice president, W. M. Molson; secretary and treasurer, J. Bourne, Jr.; executive committee, Messrs. W. H. Kinross, H. Warren and A. M. Crocker; ground committee, Messrs. Walter, Warren and Graeme.

The club will have their grounds for the ensuing year at City View Park, arrangements having been made with the park directors to this end.

Woman Attacked by a Highwayman—Death of Miss Herren, Etc.

SPECIAL DISPATCH TO THE OREGONIAN.

DAYTON, W. T., Sept 11. On the 9th inst. Mrs. T. Pettijohn, living south of Dayton, while going on horseback to a neighbor's, was stopped by a man who asked her name and demanded her money. She disclaiming the possession of money, he caught her by the throat, pulled her off the horse and kicked her in the side and struck her on the head. He seems to have been frightened by harvesters, and ran without taking the $300 she had on her person. She was found wandering in a semi-conscious condition, but she recovered and tells the foregoing story.

DEATH OF A YOUNG LADY.

Miss Nettie Herren died on the 9th inst. of typhoid fever. She had many friends in Salem. Her mother is low with the same disease.

POLITICAL.

Primaries were held Saturday. Delegates are uninstructed. Garfield county will probably go for Brents; Columbia county doubtful.

RAIN.

There was a slight rainfall to-day.

THE NORTHERN PACIFIC.

Much Grading Done between the Present Termini—Observations of Col. Dudley Evans.

Many have the impression that nearly all the work of building the Northern Pacific railroad is being prosecuted only from the two ends east from Thompson's Falls and west from Billings—and it will no doubt be a surprise to the public to know that more than half the grading between the present gap is already accomplished. Col. Dudley Evans, resident manager of Wells, Fargo & Co., returned Sunday afternoon from his eastern trip as far as Helena, and, in conversation with an OREGONIAN man, gave the following news:

The treaty with the Flathead Indians for the right of way through their reservation was successful. It was concluded on behalf of the government by Mr. McClannon, assistant attorney general for the department of the interior, through Duncan McLaughlin, an interpreter. The money consideration was $16,000, besides independent damages to several farmers for cutting up their fields.

The status of the work last week was as follows. Hallett will be over the second crossing of Clark's Fork, 10 miles below the mouth of Thompson river, in 30 days, crossing the river temporarily on false work. The next 30 miles are comparatively easy. Then will come 15 miles of heavy rock work to Horse plains. But after that, into and across the reservation to within 20 miles of Missoula, the work is light, and Hallett expects to grade one and a half miles per day. The grade is completed 20 miles west of Missoula. Some long and very high trestles will hold back track laying, but the statement that the grading will be done to Missoula by New Year's is not wild.

From Missoula to Deer Lodge, 91 miles east, grading is practically done. From Deer Lodge to Helena, through the backbone of the continent 45 miles, and from Helena to Bozeman, 110 miles, grading is well under way and will be kept up through the winter. On the western end of the eastern division the company are ambitious to close the gap from Billings to Bozeman, 150 miles, before winter, and they are almost certain of getting within 30 miles of Bozeman before New Year's.

The Bozeman tunnel is 3600 feet long from face to face and the perforation last week was one third done. The contractors expect to finish it within ten months. The Helena tunnel is about the same length and is about as far advanced as the one at Bozeman. It is likely that a temporary track will be laid around the latter tunnel to facilitate advance work.

Some months ago public attention was called in England to the surprising fact that a nephew of Robert Burns, the poet, one Gilbert Burns Begg, was ending his last days in the poor house of Glasgow. Good has come of this, though its coming has been slow. Mr. Begg was a fortnight ago taken out of this poor house and placed in very comfortable quarters at Pollockshaws, a town about three miles south of Glasgow.

W. SCHEFFLER'S PURE WINES AND BRANDY.

It is universally conceded that Wm. Scheffler's, St. Helena, Cal., good old Port, Sherry, Amber, White Reesling, Hock, Muscat, Angelica and Claret Wines, as also his Sanitary Vacuum distilled pure Grape Brandy, are really superior to other manufactures, not excepting that imported, the adulterations and impurities of which is now generally understood. Mr. Scheffler's goods are popularly known all over the Pacific coast. Eight-tenths of all the druggists in California, Oregon and Washington territory have adopted his goods, discarding the imported. Ask your druggist here in Portland, East Portland, or in any town in this northwest, and you will be quite sure to obtain it, as you will at most of the first-class hotels and bars. Mr. Scheffler's Wines and Sanitary Brandy have been steadily growing into favor until they are known well in almost every household as a medicine, if not otherwise. Mr. Scheffler's process of distilling in a vacuum is his own patent process; which relieves his brandy of the fusil oil, making it really pure, sanitary and healthful.

Mr. Geo. H. Be oh, Mr. Scheffler's representative, is now up visiting his customers.

The Pendleton high school will open October 2d, with Prof. J. C. Arnold at the head.

S. T. Lina has been awarded the contract to care for the Union county poor at $800 a year.

A few days ago, above Meacham station, between six and seven thousand railroad ties, belonging to the O. R. & N. Co., were mysteriously burned.

The report of the U. S. land office at La Grande for the month of August shows 81 homestead entries, embracing 12,472 acres of land. This exceeds any previous month in homesteads.

The Cable boys have sold their mine, in the Granite creek mining district, to Judge C. C. Goodwin, of Salt Lake City, for $10,000. Judge Goodwin is editor of the Salt Lake Tribune.

The Umatilla county agricultural association was incorporated two weeks ago, S. L. Morse, F. P. Tustin and J. W. Ellis, incorporators. They have procured the required grounds on the west side of the river near the upper bridge, about one and one-half miles from Pendleton, containing from 8 to 100 acres. Posts have been already ordered and it will be fenced as soon as they are ready. Forty shares have been issued at $100 per share.

At a meeting of the board of directors of Blue Mountain university, held last Monday, a building committee of three was appointed to take charge of the work of improving the building, which will begin immediately. It is also the intention to beautify the grounds by planting trees and bringing water thereon through the city water works. The executive board have instituted suit against Rev. G. F. Ackerman for $1700, the amount of his alleged deficiency in accounts.

The new school house at Walla Walla is to cost $19,572 and is to be completed by the 1st of January, 1883.

The Dayton woolen mills were inspected last week by W. H. Hoots, of Oregon City, with a view to start them up.

Mrs. Allen, wife of Rev. E. W. Allen, of Dayton, fell while scrubbing her floor last week and sustained a fracture of the thigh. Mrs. Allen is an elderly lady and is likely to be confined for a long time by the accident.

A party of over 60 families are now on the way from Montana via the Mullen road bound for the Crab creek country, in the Big Bend. Twenty-six wagons arrived in Spokane last Monday, and the balance are expected in about two weeks. This is but one instance of the rapid manner in which the Big Bend country is filling up.

GIVEN AWAY!
THE NEW NORTHWEST--VOL. XII.
NEW PREMIUM SERIAL, "THE WAY OF THE WORLD,"
BY ELLEN E. GIVENS.
GREAT PRIZE SCHEME FOR SUBSCRIBERS.

THE NEW NORTHWEST will begin its Twelfth Volume on Sept. 14, 1882, when publication will be commenced of ELLEN E. GIVEN'S PREMIUM STORY, "THE WAY OF THE WORLD." The publishers, desirous of increasing their journal's already large circulation, will put in operation the GREATEST PRIZE SCHEME ever inaugurated by a Pacific Coast newspaper. An outline of it is given below:

FIRST PRIZE, AN ELEGANT UPRIGHT PIANO,
To the person sending the most subscriptions.
SECOND PRIZE, A FINE ORGAN,
To the person sending the next largest list of subscriptions.
THIRD PRIZE, A VALUABLE SEWING MACHINE,
To the person sending the third largest list of subscriptions.

The musical instruments are on exhibition at D. W. PRENTICE & CO'S, No. 107 First st., Portland, where all interested are cordially invited to call and examine them. The Piano is a splendid new upright, with fine rosewood case, beautifully finished, seven octaves, worth $575, and is fully guaranteed by Prentice & Co. for five years. The Organ is an "Estey," with two full sets of reeds, nine stops, five octaves, handsome case, and worth $110.

The Sewing Machine is a Light-Running "Domestic," nickel-plated and ornamented, and worth $60. It is fully warranted by the agent, E. F. HEROY, 40 Salmon street, and may be seen either there or at his exhibit in the Mechanics' Pavilion during the Fair.

OTHER PRIZES, including Webster's Unabridged Dictionaries, Woman Suffrage Histories and "Nasby in Exile," will be awarded to those who send small lists of subscribers.

All canvassers have the privilege of 25 per cent. commission instead of prizes.

Names and money must be received by 6 o'clock P. M. Wednesday, November 15, 1882, when awards are to be made.

WRITE A POSTAL CARD FOR SAMPLE COPY OF THE NEW NORTHWEST,
Containing full particulars.

THE NEW NORTHWEST is a neat eight-page paper, independent in both politics and religion, and besides its Woman Suffrage departments, contains a better variety of stories, poetry and miscellaneous literary matter than any other paper in Oregon; also, essays on political, social and religious topics by talented contributors, and last, but by no means least, letters of travel from the senior editor, MRS. A. S. DUNIWAY, who is constantly traveling through Oregon and Washington, and whose correspondence has become a marked feature of the paper. The NEW NORTHWEST is well printed on cream-tint book paper, and is universally acknowledged to be the handsomest publication in the Pacific Northwest. Subscription rates (in advance) per year, $3; six months, $1 50.

Five Thousand Extra Copies of the NEW NORTHWEST of September 14th, containing the first chapter of the new story, will be printed for gratuitous distribution.

INTENDING CANVASSERS will be furnished free any number of specimen copies they desire. Send a postal card or letter, or call at the office, No. 5 Washington street, up stairs, on or after Thursday, Sept 14, for them.

BOARD OF TRADE.

Annual Address of President Macleay and Reports of Officers.

HON. M. C. GEORGE ADDRESSES THE BOARD.

Action Taken in Regard to the Presentation of the Pilotage Bill to the Legislature—Committee Appointed to Welcome the Government Engineers Coming to Examine the Columbia Bar.

Board called to order at 7:30, President Macleay in the chair, with a large attendance present. Minutes of the last meeting read by the secretary and approved by the board. Hon. M. C. George occupied a seat at the right of the president.

President Macleay then read the following

ANNUAL ADDRESS.

Gentlemen of the Board of Trade: With the completion of another year it becomes my duty to review the various events which have marked the advance of our community in wealth and prosperity during that period.

Our means of internal transportation have been greatly extended. The lines of the Oregon Railway & Navigation Company have been completed from the Cascades to the Dalles, in the face of engineering difficulties of seemingly insurmountable magnitude.

The line from this city to the Cascades is also being rapidly built; and we may confidently expect that by January 1st, 1883 we may be able to ship freight without breaking bulk, from Portland to Riparia, W. T., on the Snake river, a distance of 300 miles, and to some point beyond Pendleton, Oregon, both on the lines of the O. R. & N. Co., whilst the Northern Pacific railroad expects to reach Missoula, Montana, a distance of 614 from Portland by the same date.

The ocean going fleet of the Oregon Railway and Navigation company has been increased during the last year, by the addition of the magnificent iron steamship, the Queen of the Pacific, of 3000 tons register, thus completing a line of four first-class ocean steamers of 10,322 tons burden, plying between Portland and San Francisco every four days. The same company also runs a semi-monthly line of steamers between Portland and San Francisco for the exclusive carriage of explosive and combustible freight.

The progress of the Northern Pacific railroad has been marked by indomitable energy, patient industry and celerity of construction. The road is now complete to Rock Island in Montana territory, about 500 miles from Portland, working from this end, whilst from the eastward it has reached the crossing of the Yellowstone river, opposite Billings, Montana, leaving an uncompleted gap of about 650 miles only.

From present indications the road will be finished and opened for trans-continental travel about the close of 1883.

As concerns terminal facilities, and conveniences for commerce at this port, much progress has been made during the last twelve months. Private enterprise has erected several new wharves and warehouses, whilst the extensive terminal facilities, and the new dry dock of the O. R. & N. Co. are of sufficient importance to demand a detailed description in the report of the secretary of the board. The extension of the Oregon and California railroad southward is making satisfactory progress. The road is in operation to Myrtle creek, 220½ miles south of Portland; and it is expected that track will be laid to upper Cow creek, 30 miles further, by the close of this year. The company has a large construction force in the field, and unless the winter season should prove unfavorable, grading will be pushed forward into the Rogue river valley.

The necessity for heavy rock work and long tunnels in the mountains, prevents any exact estimate of the date of final completion of the road; its officers, however, hope that they may successfully terminate their labors and give us through connection with San Francisco by the close of 1883.

The extension of the railroads is already opening new markets for our jobbers, chief of which is that of western Montana. During last August I accompanied a delegation of Portland merchants to Missoula, in that territory, our object being to form the acquaintance of the business men of that place and to endeavor to establish relations with them which should secure to Oregon a portion of their trade. We were cordially received by the merchants and capitalists of Missoula, and were assured that it was their desire to trade with us, and that upon the completion of the Northern Pacific railroad to their town a portion of their purchases would be made in this market. Already several orders have been received by some of our leading houses, and I believe that heavy shipments will hereafter be made to Missoula, Butte, Deer Lodge and Helena.

In view of the alarming decrease of the run of salmon in the Columbia river, I deem it of imperative necessity that immediate action should be taken, either by the general government or the state of Oregon, looking to the artificial propagation of this valuable food fish. The salmon in the river were noticeably less in number this year than last, and whilst the example of the Sacramento river shows that artificial propagation may be confidently relied on to keep up and even increase the supply, it also shows that it takes some years for the young fish to attain maturity and enable us to reap the benefit of artificial propagation.

During last winter the Oregon and Washington Fish Propagating Company tendered their hatchery on the Clackamas river to the United States, provided the government would carry it on. Their own funds were exhausted, hence the offer.

If the government will not do the work, I believe the legislature of the state should take it up. The importance of the salmon industry to the state of Oregon, may be seen from the following figures: The catch of 1881 amounted to 550,000 cases, worth in first hands $2,750,000. There are invested in canneries and their appliances upon the Columbia, $2,000,000 of capital. The fishing season lasts four months, during which there are employed about 7500 men, whose wages for the season aggregate [illegible]. The general government receives in duties on tin plate, lead, etc., used in packing the fish, about 40,000 annually.

The importance of preserving such an industry is paramount, and I earnestly hope that our public men may appreciate the gravity of the situation, and make proper provision for the protection and propagation of the salmon. A well drawn and practical law to prevent the indiscriminate slaughter of salmon by fish-wheels and other murderous devices is also urgently needed. The length of the fishing season should also be regulated by law, the times of the year when fishing is prohibited, and the duration of the weekly close times should be so clearly and unequivocally expressed as to afford no room for misunderstanding, and render the labors of the state's attorney in securing the conviction of the violators of the law less arduous than at present. The legislature of Washington territory should also pass laws exactly similar to those of Oregon, thus preventing the law breakers of one community seeking safety by flight into the jurisdiction of the other.

The agricultural interests of the state have been healthy and prosperous. A larger acreage has been brought under cultivation, and farming lands have been in demand at better prices than have heretofore prevailed.

The great increase in immigration has attracted wide-spread attention; a steady stream of incoming passengers having arrived at this port during the past season at the rate of 150 souls per diem. There is also a large immigration overland, estimated as being equal to 40 per cent. of that arriving by sea. These immigrants are of the most desirable class, generally bringing more or less capital with them. Numerous small towns are springing up all over Oregon and Washington territory, whilst those already established are rapidly increasing in size and importance.

During the past season tonnage suitable for carrying our grain to Europe came freely to hand in such quantities and at such times as suited the demands of our shippers. Rates of freight were extremely high [illegible] January 1, 1882, at which time a decline [illegible] which continued until about June 1, [illegible] when very moderate rates were charged. The average rate was somewhat higher than last year, the price of wheat being also higher, in consequence of an improved European demand.

Our rich lands and never-failing crops combine to make Oregon an essentially agricultural community. Nevertheless, manufactures have not been neglected. The older establishments of the state have increased their product in nearly every instance from [illegible] per cent. Flour milling is receiving greater attention. Old mills are being extended, new ones built, and much foreign capital is being invested in this direction. With our abundant water power and fine wheat there would seem to be no practical limit to the extension of our milling facilities.

The experience of other markets having demonstrated the wisdom of exporting manufactured product, rather than raw material. The substitution of flour for wheat, in outgoing cargoes, will redound to the profit and advantage of our state.

As the secretary's report will contain accurate reviews of the wheat crop, the wool clip and the salmon pack of the past season, I shall not detain you with any remarks upon these three principal sources of our wealth.

It is to be hoped that the labors of the United States tariff commission, now in session, may be productive of some good. In a country as vast as the United States, with the conflicting interests of its various sections, there is no subject which demands more profound statesmanship than the proper adjustment of customs duties. The present tariff operates with peculiar hardship upon Oregon and Washington. The high duty upon steel rails adds vastly to the cost of railroad construction, while that upon grain bags diminishes largely the profits of our farmers.

The duty upon those articles, which are necessary to the continued prosperity of an agricultural community like ours, should be removed, whilst the deficiency in the revenue thereby arising should be made up by increasing those upon articles of luxury.

The growing importance of shipbuilding upon Puget Sound, Coos Bay and the Columbia river also admonishes us that congressional action in this direction is imperatively needed to foster this industry and to restore our merchant marine to the place it formerly occupied. Our commerce should be relieved from excessive taxation, and the duties upon all materials that enter into the construction of sail or steam vessels should be abolished.

The cost of building vessels in the United States is only about 10 per cent greater than in England, and were we relieved from excessive taxation and onerous duties I doubt not we could compete with that country for the carrying trade of the world.

The commerce of our port has suffered, and ship owners have become greatly dissatisfied, by reason of the obscurity of our legislation upon pilotage and towage, and the linking together by law of these two subjects, an anomaly not presented at any other port of the world. Pilotage is a matter to be regulated by the state; towage should be left to private enterprise and the natural effects of competition. Acting upon these opinions, the board has had prepared by the best legal talent of our community, a clear, thorough and practical bill, regulating pilotage and entirely ignoring towage. This bill is to be submitted to the legislature now in session, and it is of vital importance that all classes of our citizens, and especially those in the rural districts, should do all in their power to ensure its passage. The farmers are specially interested, as a suitable pilot law will undoubtedly tend to reduce freights, and by so doing, correspondingly enhance the value of wheat.

There is no subject of greater interest, no work of more vital importance to the commercial interests of the entire state of Oregon, than the improvement of the river channels from Portland to the sea.

The general government has made certain small appropriations for the purpose, but no comprehensive plan has been inaugurated—no systematic work has been done.

During the year last past the board appropriated all its available surplus funds, which, together with a liberal amount subscribed by the merchants and capitalists of Portland, were judiciously expended by Captain Charles F. Powell, United States engineer, in deepening the channel at St. Helens and in dredging on the Columbia bar. The amount, however, whilst large, considering the source from whence it came, was by no means enough to do more than effect a very temporary change for the better. The examples of Glasgow, Montreal, Philadelphia, Baltimore and other cities, show that local funds must be relied on to accomplish such improvements, as are needed in our case. Those to be benefited by the change are those who must effect it. In our case the people of the whole state are interested. Every bushel of wheat exported over the bar pays an excess of freight money, more than proportioned to the dangers and difficulties of the passage. Whatever tends to lower freights, to attract shipping and to remove the impediments to commerce, in the same measure increases the value of the crop and raises the prices paid by the shipper to the farmer. It is for this reason that I believe the time has now come for the legislature of the state of Oregon to grapple with this problem and to provide liberal means for its solution. I believe that the funds of the state can be expended upon no more worthy object than this, which by increasing the value of our products, attracting foreign capital and immigration, would greatly add to the taxable resources of the state, returning to its treasury ten fold the amount expended.

In this connection it will be proper to refer to the remarkable success of the Oregon Railway and Navigation company in dredging St. Helens bar at their own expense with the propeller Walla Walla. This fine steamer was taken to the bar and made fast by anchors. Water ballast was then pumped in until her stern was sunk to the river's bed, when her propeller was started with a velocity sufficient to have driven her ahead, had she been free, at the rate of 10 miles an hour. The scouring action of the current thus produced was such, that in three days, she had cut a channel completely through St. Helens bar, 1000 feet long, 100 feet wide and 22 feet deep. This result will prove of incalculable benefit to us, and it is confidently expected that no grain ship will be obliged to lighter during the coming season. In the above work 18,000 cubic yards of sand were removed, at a cost of about 8 cents per yard.

During November last the board addressed a petition to the speaker of the United States house of representatives, praying him to place our representative, the Hon. M. C. George, upon the committee on commerce of the house. You are to be congratulated that we were successful in this matter and that Mr. George was placed upon the committee, an honor never before extended to a newly elected member of congress.

The progress of this board during the year has been extremely gratifying to its officers and members. There has been a large increase in the membership, which includes all branches of trade. Our rooms have been suitably and tastefully furnished, and we at last have a place of meeting to which we can point with pride, and in which we can receive commercial visitors in a manner to reflect no discredit upon us.

In conclusion allow me to thank the various officers and members of committees of the board for the courtesy and able co-operation which I have received at their hands.

DONALD MACLEAY,
President,

Following the president's address, came the

SECRETARY'S REPORT.

PORTLAND, Or., Sept. 11.

To the President of the Board of Trade of Portland, Or.: SIR:—Pursuant to the by-laws of the board, I beg leave to present herewith my annual report of the principal matters which have engaged the attention of the board during the past year, together with statistical information compiled and furnished by the assistant secretary and statistician.

Sept. 12, 1881, the membership of the board was	73
During the year there were added to membership	187
Died	1
Resigned	3
Dropped from roll	6
Membership at date	250

The resignations above reported were in consequence of removal from the city, those dropped from the roll were for non-payment of dues.

The value of the Board of Trade to the commercial interests of Portland is, perhaps, not sufficiently appreciated. It is the mouthpiece of public opinion; the nucleus about which those desirous of inaugurating any trade reform may gather.

In all action taken it represents the united merchants and capitalists of our city. Individual attempts are never so successful as combined efforts, and it is for this reason that the board is recognized, its requests heeded and its opinions treated with respect by all with whom it communicates. Its work is beneficial to all classes of citizens. By fostering commerce, it benefits the wholesale trade; by attracting immigration it increases the number of homes whose inmates patronize retail establishments. Its sphere of usefulness is constantly enlarging, and I trust that our citizens generally will aid us by becoming members of the board and taking an active interest in its proceedings.

[Here follows a list of the meetings held during the year, full reports of which were published in THE OREGONIAN.]

Perhaps the most important work done by the board during the year was that connected with the placing of suitable tugs upon the Columbia bar.

At the January meeting a committee was appointed to consider the subject. They at once took active steps to organize a joint stock corporation under the name and style of the "Portland Tug Boat Company of Portland, Oregon." The capital stock is $100,000, to which the members of the board of trade subscribed liberally. The stockholders include the principal merchants, capitalists and property owners of our city, thus insuring the continued management of their tugs, in the manner best calculated to advance the commercial interests of Portland. Their first tug for service on the Columbia bar, has already been purchased and is daily expected to arrive. She is a powerful iron tug, the Pioneer, formerly of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. She has compound engines, with cylinders of 18 inches and 31 inches diameter, by 28 inches stroke. She is 110 feet long, four years old, and first-class in every respect. She is fitted with all modern appliances for towing and wrecking purposes, and is well adapted for her work. In conjunction with the above tug a pilot schooner will be kept constantly in the offing, ready at all times to supply pilots to vessels approaching the bar.

Other tugs will be placed in service when the demands of commerce require their aid, and the ship-owners of the world may hereafter rely upon finding first-class tug service at moderate rates, upon the Columbia bar.

The Oregon Improvement Company has lately erected a large coal dock on the east side of the river, adjoining the railroad terminus below Albina. Its dimensions are as follows:—length, 250 feet; width, 40 feet; height, 40 feet. Its storage capacity is 4300 tons, and for convenience of arrangement and economy in unloading colliers, and loading cars, steamboats or carts is in fully equal to any similar structure in the country.

The Northern Pacific Terminal company has also been incorporated with a capital of $3,000,000. Its articles of incorporation are liberal, and include all powers necessary to enable it to supply every terminal facility required by the various railroads comprising our system, both at this point and elsewhere. So far as Portland is concerned, it is in contemplation to bridge the Willamette and to erect an immense passenger depot in the city proper. Upon the east side of the river, below Albina, a large wharf will be built with an elevator for wheat and extensive freight warehouses. The machine and car shops, round houses, &c., will also be erected in the same locality.

For several years past the need of a dry dock of sufficient capacity to accommodate the largest ships entering the Columbia river has been considered by owners and underwriters, but the building of a dock was never seriously entertained until last October, when Mr. Villard, president of the Oregon Railway and Navigation Company, proposed the matter to members of the board of trade. Finding none of our capitalists prepared to undertake the project, the Oregon Railway and Navigation Company, itself a large owner of ocean and river steamers, determined to supply the want. Accordingly plans and estimates were prepared for the construction of a dock to be furnished with the amplest facilities for repairing the vessels of the company's fleet and which should also serve the convenience of the shipping of the port. The dry dock is situated upon the best spot to be found in the harbor. It is upon the company's ground in Albina, just below the new depot, warehouse, elevator and coal wharves, and convenient to the machine shops, switch yards and termini of the railroads radiating from Portland. It is built entirely of wood in an excavation or basin cut in the riverside. It is the intention of the company to make this dry dock of advantage to Portland and attractive to ships seeking freights here, where they may have all kinds of repairs made with economy and dispatch, from repainting to rebuilding of hull, spars or machinery of wooden or iron vessels. The business of the establishment will be conducted by the Oregon Railway and Navigation Company, and dockage, materials and labor will be furnished at market prices.

The dimensions of the dry dock are as follows:

	Feet.
Extreme length inside of caisson	400
Breadth at top	115
Breadth at bottom	45
Depth	50
Draught over sill, highest water	46
Draught over sill, lowest water	18
Entrance gate, width at sill	41
Entrance gate, width at top	72

This dock will be of easy access to vessels, and is within a mile and a half of the board of trade rooms. The operation of docking a ship, and pumping the water out of the dock, at the ordinary stages of the river, will occupy about three hours' time.

It is intended that the dock shall be completed and ready for business by June, 1883.

A very large business in real estate was done during the year, the transactions in Multnomah county aggregating over five millions of dollars.

During some months the volume of business was far above the average, which is to be explained by the fact that much property which had been purchased by individuals acting in the interests of the various railroad companies was during those months transferred to the several corporations, thus largely adding to the usual figures.

Our exports of wheat and flour are steadily increasing. Not one-tenth part of our cultivable lands have as yet been brought under cultivation. With the numerous ramifications of our railroad system, which are now being pushed to the outer verge of the vast region tributary to Portland, it is safe to say that from this time forward we can confidently expect a large annual increase in our grain trade.

At present we have not more than two persons to the square mile in the basin of the Columbia river; but the rate at which immigration is now setting in in this direction justifies our prediction of a vast development of our agricultural wealth in the near future.

The wool clip of 1882 exceeded that of 1881 by about 25 per cent. The quality of the wool, however, was by no means up to standard. In consequence of the sale of large numbers of wethers by Eastern Oregon wool growers to eastern buyers, which necessitated early shearing, the wool from that section reached this market earlier than usual. The condition of the clips then received were disappointing, the wool being heavy and lacking brightness, but well graded and sound in staple. Buyers expected improvement later in the season, but were deceived, as the above aspects manifested themselves in almost every clip received from Eastern Oregon. This is to be accounted for by the fact that the sheep were in excellent condition during the winter, thus retaining the grease accumulated during the preceding summer; and also by the very dry, windy spring months, which filled the fleece with sand. On an average the shrinkage of this year's clip exceeded that of last year's by fully 5 per cent.

The presence of several San Francisco buyers in this market inflated values, giving an erroneous idea to the growers not acquainted with the actual facts; hence fully one fourth of this year's clip remains unsold, and cannot be placed except at a concession of 15 per cent. on opening prices. Willamette valley wool is year by year deteriorating in quality owing to the neglect of farmers to improve their flocks by new blood. But few make a specialty of wool-growing in the valley, the majority of the farmers looking upon their flocks merely as scavengers to clean their lands. The valley wool was delivered in fair condition, and the yield was up to the average, but until the majority of the flocks are crossed with Merino bucks, the greater portion of the valley wool will have to be classed with the lowest grades.

The result of the season's salmon pack upon the Columbia river was, upon the whole, satisfactory to the canneries. Our salmon still holds its own, and is gaining popularity in the markets of the world. The pack fell short of that of last season by from ten to fifteen thousand cases; but as the price received was higher, it is believed the packers made more money.

The value of the catch was nearly three millions of dollars, and the magnitude of this industry warns us to take timely steps for its preservation.

For more detailed information upon various branches of trade, I would respectfully refer you to the tables presented in the report of the assistant secretary and statistician.

In closing my report, I wish to acknowledge my indebtedness to the assistant secretary, Mr. Benjamin I. Cohen.

I have have always found him courteous and obliging, and he has discharged the various duties devolved upon him with intelligence, faithfulness and promptness. Respectfully submitted.

F. K. ARNOLD, Secretary.

INTERESTING STATISTICS.

The assistant secretary then presented the following compilation concerning the results of trade during the past year:

Number of passengers carried on the ocean division of the O. R. & N. Co. during the year ending June 30, 1882, 35,765.

Of these passengers 23,619 more arrived in Portland than were taken away.

During the year ending August 31, 1882, 289 vessels with an aggregate tonnage of 411,061 arrived at Portland, and 283 vessels with a tonnage of 430,762 sailed from this port.

The foreign exports of wheat were 2,861,289 centals, valued at $4,735,321.

The foreign exports of flour were 373,987 barrels, valued at $1,785,208.

The receipts of flour by the O. R. & N. Co. were 197,524 barrels.

The shipments of flour by the O. R. & N. Co. were 89,043 barrels.

The number of buildings erected in the city was about 400, at a cost of $1,500,000.

The transactions in real estate in Multnomah county amounted during the year to $5,267,258 13.

The price of wheat delivered on the wharf ranged from $1 55 to $1 68 per cental.

The salmon pack of 1882 aggregated 530,851 cases, worth in first hands, $2,813,510 30.

The post office in Portland was so efficiently conducted as to return a net profit to the government of $39,450 42 for the year ending June 30, 1882.

The internal revenue paid in the state of Oregon to the general government during the same period amounted to $89,832 17.

The total assessed value of property of all kinds in Multnomah county, less indebtedness, was $13,933,205.

Allow me to congratulate the business men of Portland upon these substantial evidences of our prosperity. Respectfully submitted.

BENJ. I. COHEN,
Assistant Secretary and Statistician.

ROUTINE BUSINESS.

The secretary made a report of disbursements, which was referred to an auditing committee consisting of Messrs. Thompson, Kapus and Cook.

Information was given to the board by Mr. Dodd that the merchant's exchange had compiled some tables that were of great importance to shippers, and would sell to the board for publication. The price asked was $150. A committee of three, consisting of Messrs. Hewett, Sibson and McCraken were appointed to examine these tables and given power to act in the matter of purchasing as they might see fit.

The report of the committee on dredging was adopted.

Upon motion a vote of thanks was tendered by the board to the O. R. & N. company, and especially to Messrs. Dodge and Gates for the work done in removing St. Helen's bar.

The committee on membership reported the following names, all of whom were declared elected as members of the board: Jas. Steel & Co., F. S. Bosworth & Co., C. A. Plummer & Co., F. H. Page, Cohen, Davis & Co., C. W. Cornelius, Sturges, Larsen & Co., Heubner, Lehy & Co., Mark Levy, London & S. F. Bank, F. S. Chadbourne & Co.

Hon. M. C. George and D. P. Thompson were made honorary members of the board.

The following was unanimously adopted:

Resolved, That the members of the Portland board of trade do earnestly request the members of the senate and house of representatives in legislature assembled to do all in their power to secure the passage of the pilot bill which will be placed before them. We assure them that the people of the entire state have a deep interest in the success of the measure which is transferred to their care.

Hon. M. C. George addressed the board, thanking the president for his kind mention and paying a glowing tribute to the yet undeveloped resources of Oregon. His remarks were received with enthusiastic cheers.

The thanks of the board were tendered to the officers for the able and efficient manner in which they discharged their duties during the past year.

When the election of officers for the ensuing year was announced in order, the board, upon motion, voted unanimously to retain the old officers during the second term. They are as follows: President, Donald Macleay; first vice president, C. H. Dodd; second vice president, P. C. Schuyler; secretary, F. K. Arnold; assistant secretary, B. I. Cohen.

The appointing of committees was deferred until the next meeting.

It was moved that a committee of five be appointed to go to Salem for the purpose of presenting the merits of the pilotage bill to the legislature. The president said he would announce the names of such committee in a few days.

A committee, with Mr. C. Prescott as chairman and Messrs. Corbett, Chapman, Hodge and George, were appointed to welcome the delegation of engineers, who have been sent by the secretary of war to examine the Columbia river and the bar at its mouth in order to report to congress the needed improvements.

The board then adjourned.

THE UTAH COMMISSION.

Their First Report Sent to the Interior Department at Washington.

[SPECIAL DISPATCH TO THE OREGONIAN.]

WASHINGTON, Sept. 10.—A report from the Utah commission has been received at the interior department, dated Salt Lake, Utah, August 1st. They give full details of their meetings and organization and say that since their arrival their sessions have been held each day. A strong disposition with some non-Mormon citizens against preparing for the election of delegates to congress had manifested itself. Before the work of preparation, therefore, was commenced investigation as to the condition of affairs, and examination of the state law and duty of the commission thereunder, the following preamble and resolution, were adopted:

Whereas, It is provided by the revised statutes of the United States, session 1862, that every territory shall have the right to send a delegate to the house of representatives of the United States, and as it is further provided (section 2) that such elections shall be held in all the territories of the United States on the Tuesday after the first Monday in November, 1882; therefore

Resolved, That in order to prepare for such election in the territory of Utah on the day so established, the commission will proceed forthwith to appoint registration officers to revise the registration lists now on file in the office of the clerks of each of the several counties, in the manner prescribed by law.

In pursuance of this resolution the commission proceeded with great care and deliberation to prepare rules and regulations for the guidance of registration and selecting of officers to be appointed. This was a difficult and delicate task, because of the necessity of framing rules and regulations governing the registration of voters and conduct of the election to conform to the principles of the requirements of the act of congress as well as the law of the territory. We enclose a printed copy of the same, together with forms of affidavits, etc., provided by the commission. The matter of appointment of registration officers for the several counties in the territory was then taken up and one for each county has been duly appointed and commissioned. In addition to these a deputy or assistant in each voting precinct of the territory will be immediately appointed by our selections and must necessarily be influenced in considerable degree by suggestions and recommendations of leading citizens here. Embarrassments in this direction have been great, but the commission have endeavored to secure the very best available men, rejecting, of course, all persons who are ineligible under the law. From present indications it appears the class of persons who are deprived of the right of suffrage by act of congress will not attempt to register or vote. These will number, male and female, probably 10,000 voters. Many of the non-Mormons have hitherto refrained from voting, but it is believed at the November election they will cast a larger vote than before. However, the business of the commission, as understood by members thereof relates not to questions of parties nor candidates, but to securing so far as possible a fair registration and impartially conducted election, under the law. As before suggested the commission have removed many embarrassments and complications. The opposition made at the outset by some non-Mormons of respectability and influence against holding a regular election of delegate in congress as per by-law, in November next, was an unpleasant feature of the situation, but there does not appear to be under the law any discretion whatever for the commission. The law demands an election by the people of the territory who were clearly entitled to representation in congress. If the same could be secured through due observance of the restrictions imposed in relation to bigamy and polygamy, we did not see how we could excuse the omission of being present and prepared to proceed with the work assigned us. We should not even attempt to perform this manifest duty, and so it was decided to proceed. It was not deemed advisable, even if the power was in the commission, concerning which there is some doubt, to commence a new registration of the voters of the territory, but after very careful consideration it was decided that revision of the existing registration lists in September as required by the territorial law applied to the same governing principles of the Edmunds act. We think the regularity of this proceeding cannot be questioned. Its effectiveness will be equal to an entirely new registration, and we believe the results of the election will so demonstrate; but in preparation of rules and regulations to govern registration and the conduct of the election as before stated, the labor of assimilating the act of congress and local election law was tedious and perplexing, involving much greater responsibility than was agreeable to the commission to assume. But to accomplish the results required by section 8 of the Edmunds act, it became necessary to use all powers conferred. Latterly embarrassment came in the form of a demand on the part of certain Mormon citizens of high character, that the commission should assume jurisdiction and decide the local statute authorizing women to vote to be illegal. We concluded it was not competent for the commission to repeal or modify that statute in the manner suggested; that the principle of female suffrage is in no respect in conflict with the purpose of the Edmunds law and therefore that the commission had nothing whatever to do with the subject. Moreover, we found on investigation, that this statute had been in force twelve years without being adjudicated in the courts of the territory or disturbed by congress. In conclusion, permit us to say, we believe the results to be reached through careful registration are already ensured and an impartial election which can hardly fail to follow, will be satisfactory to the government and the country.

In closing this report it is due to the territorial secretary, who is ex-officio secretary of the commission, Arthur L. Thomas, to say the commission has received from him valuable assistance in its work, particularly in the matter of selection of registration and other officers. Very respectfully your obedient servants,

(Signed)

MOTHER'S WAY.

Oft within our little cottage,
As the shadows gently fall,
While the sunlight touches softly
One sweet face upon the wall,
Do we gather close together,
And in hushed and tender tone,
Ask each other's full forgiveness
For the wrong that each has done.
Should you wonder at this custom
At the ending of the day,
Eye and voice would quickly answer,
"It was once our mother's way."

If our home be bright and cheery,
If it hold a welcome true,
Opening wide its door of greeting
To the many—not the few;
If we share our father's bounty
With the needy, day by day,
'Tis because our hearts remember
This was ever mother's way.

Sometimes when our hearts grow weary
Or our task seems very long;
When our burdens look too heavy,
And we deem the right all wrong,
Then we gain a new fresh courage,
As we rise to proudly say
"Let us do our duty bravely,
This was our mother's way."

Thus we keep her memory precious,
While we never cease to pray,
That at last when lengthening shadows
Mark the evening of life's day,
They may find us waiting calmly
To go home our dear mother's way.

WINNING AND LOSING.

"Ha! ha! ha!—it'll be such a good joke!" and Richard Strout gave himself an approving wink as he stood before the glass in admiring contemplation of a complicated bow knot, accomplished at the expense of vast mental effort and the crush and ruin of half a dozen cravats.

It was the evening of Mrs. Dazzlitt's ball. All Antequam—at least all the fashion of it would be there, and Mr. Richard Strout had gotten himself up with special reference to establishing his own brilliant self. He was to be the escort of Miss Coryphe Wellmet, the tip-top beauty of Antequam, and only daughter of a rich, retired banker, who might any day succumb to a benignly providential stroke of apoplexy.

In the race in which the stake was the lady and her fortune, Richard Strout was sure he had the inside track. It was plain to his eyes that she was deeply smitten—how could she help it for that matter?—wasn't he, the aforesaid Richard, simply irresistible? He hadn't popped the question yet, but there was plenty of time for that; he would do it in due season—and when he did he had no misgivings as to what would be the answer. Having the fish securely hooked, like a true Waltonian he would enjoy playing with it awhile.

But what was the joke Mr. Strout was contemplating jointly with the wonderful bow of his cravat? Let him unfold it to Miss Coryphe himself as they met in her father's front parlor preparatory to starting to the ball.

"See here, Coris," he said, touching her elbow with a finger miraculously gloved, "I've got a little job for you."

"What is it, most noble Dick?"

"To tame a bear."

"Shall I begin now?" she asked, with a roguish look which seemed to intimate that the object to be operated on might not be a thousand miles away.

"Ha! ha!" laughed Richard, not quite heartily—"present company, you know, is excepted. The particular grizzly on which I would exercise your docile power is not here, but will be at the ball to-night. You've heard me mention Bruce Dandridge," he began.

"The bore and bookworm?"

"[illegible]"

"And woman-hater?"

"Exactly—how well you remember!"

"[illegible] too bashful to kiss his own mother, I think I've heard you say. Well, what of this [illegible] specimen of yours?"

"He's visiting some friends here in Antequam, and, as I said, will be at Mrs. Dazzlitt's [illegible] to-night."

"And he's your——?"

"[illegible]" added Richard; "you've hit it [illegible]."

"[illegible] Coris," he continued, "I've laid a [illegible] with Charley Bruce, an old college mate of Bruce Dandridge's and mine, that if Bruce [illegible] introduced to you he'll fall in love and propose to you in a fortnight. Won't you help me win?"

"You don't want me to court him, do you?" Coryphe replied; "you know it isn't leap-year."

"[illegible] but if you'll let yourself on to play the agreeable, I think I'll stand a chance. I know [illegible] heavy odds, but it proves my confidence in your charms."

"Well, trot out your monster, and let me [illegible]," said Coryphe, buttoning the dozenth button on her right glove, which completed her preparations for departure.

Mrs. Dazzlitt's spacious parlors were already [illegible] when the fair Coryphe entered with her [illegible]. The belle of Antequam never appeared to better advantage, and Richard [illegible] heart swelled with pride at the consummate [illegible] from the circle of masculine [illegible] he and his beautiful companion [illegible].

"[illegible] him now," whispered Richard, when they had paid their devoirs to the mistress of the mansion. "Let me bring him at once, that [illegible]."

"Miss Wellmet, Mr. Dandridge," said Richard, returning and presenting a tall and singular [illegible] gentleman, who colored deeply, and in [illegible] of his confusion, he did and said [illegible] without a bit of awkwardness. [illegible] slipped away and left the two together. [illegible] forming for a dance. Bruce [illegible] could do no less than ask the lady [illegible].

"[illegible] Miss Wellmet, you will find me an [illegible] partner," he apologized. "Should [illegible] I can't trust you to set them [illegible]."

[illegible] awkward at first; but Coryphe [illegible] so pleasantly that his embarrassment [illegible] and soon wore off; and [illegible] his mathematical head so [illegible] the figure that none would [illegible] he had taken a "double first" [illegible] Carbole's dancing academy.

[illegible] over, Mr. Dandridge led [illegible] and engaged her in a conversation [illegible] both seemed deeply interested.

"[illegible] going beautifully," said Dick to [illegible], looking from a distance, and noting [illegible] looks with which Coryphe drew [illegible] and the brilliant light that shone [illegible] eyes as they met those of his [illegible].

[illegible] another dance, and another talk [illegible] than the first.

"[illegible] it's going on swimmingly!" [illegible] "I mus' manage to [illegible]. At this rate I shall [illegible] inside of time."

[illegible] and casting a meaning look on [illegible].

"Would you mind if I went home and left [illegible] Mr. Dandridge's care?" he asked. "I [illegible] taken with a racking headache. [illegible] Bruce here no apology for affording him a real pleasure."

Mr. Strout was excused, and, as it almost [illegible] with thanks.

Next day, when he called to hear Coryphe's [illegible], he was gratified to find [illegible] Dandridge had preceded him. It [illegible] looked as if his own coming had disturbed a tete-a-tete.

[illegible] couldn't help rubbing his hands [illegible]. He made but a brief stay. [illegible] too shrewd to mar his chances by [illegible] on the rule that "two's company." [illegible] a trump!" he cried, as he walked [illegible].

[illegible] day after day, as Richard renewed his [illegible] found Coryphe and Bruce together. [illegible] seemed as if it was the same tete-a-tete continued.

"[illegible] Charley Bruce and Bruce Dandridge," he chuckled, "look like a pair of [illegible] when the one hears his money jingling in my pocket, and I've married Coryphe [illegible] other's nose?"

[illegible] called Richard Strout to the city [illegible] days. He sent a note to Coryphe, [illegible] to keep it up lively—hinting that [illegible] return he should have a secret of his [illegible] disclose, the nature of which she had [illegible] long ago surmised.

Dick and Charley Bruce agreed that their wager should be left to Coryphe's decision, for [illegible] of delicacy to be communicated secretly, and Dick went away convinced that good [illegible] awaited his return.

Three days sufficed for his business in the city, and Dick was taking a parting stroll down Broadway to kill the hour till train time.

He stopped suddenly. From the door of a hotel a lady and a gentleman came out, and were about entering a carriage having a pile of trunks on the top.

"Hello! Dick," cried Bruce Dandridge, on whose arm hung Coryphe, blushing like a rose. "Sorry my wife and I didn't see you sooner."

"Your wi——" Dick couldn't finish the word.

"Yes; it was quite a little affair, you see—no cards—no fuss—and now we are on our way to the steamer for a quiet little wedding-trip to Europe. But by-by, old fellow—time's up."

What it was that Dick muttered we won't pretend to say. If it was a congratulation it stuck in his throat. Coryphe waived her hand from the carriage window, and Dick turned with a mumbled malediction on the sex.

He had won his bet, but lost the prize he most coveted.

A HISTORIC SPOT.

Lincoln's Inn Fields in the British Metropolis—Some of the Things for which the Locality is Famous.

J. M. Francis, in the Troy Times.

Lincoln's Inn Fields is one of the largest squares in London the area being that of the great pyramid of Giza twenty-three acres. The Fields were enclosed with railings about 130 years ago. They have now the appearance of a large and beautiful garden. Previous to the year 1750, the Fields had been used as a place of capital punishment. It was here that Babington and his accomplices were executed in 1586, and where in July, 1683, Lord William Russell was beheaded. A stone's throw to the south is "The Old Curiosity Shop," made famous by Dicken. Across the way from this is the tavern known as "Black Jack," where the great English novelist in Bohemian costume is said to have written his story of "Little Nell," and watched with interest "Dick Swiveller" quenching his perennial thirst. On the west side of the Fields is a house built by Inigo Jones, the celebrated architect, for an earl of Lindsay, which was afterwards the residence of the proud duke of Somerset. At the northwest corner is a large house, which was inhabited by Lord Chancellor Somers and the duke of Newcastle, the leader of the Pelham administration under George II. Almost next door to the hotel is the Soane Museum, which for its size contains one of the finest collections of paintings to be seen anywhere. On the east side of the square is Lincoln's Inn, called after De Lacy, earl of Lincoln, who died 1312, and who had a house and garden here. The old dining hall was rebuilt in 1506 on the site of an ancient hall. The Inn contains an excellent library, which was founded as far back as 1497, and some of the books still retain the iron rings by which they were formerly secured to the shelves, while others are in their original oak bindings. The society of Lincoln's Inn counts among its members Sir Thomas More, Sir Matthew Hale, John Selden and Lords Mansfield and Hardwicke. Ben Jonson, "Rare Ben," the friend of Shakespeare is said to have worked as bricklayer at some of the old buildings which still stand here, holding a trowel in his hand and having a book in his pocket; but "the walks under the elms," spoken of by him, disappeared unfortunately a few years ago. Lincoln's Inn Fields is, in fact, the center of a city of lawyers—acres upon acres of law courts and lawyers' offices and chambers extending all the way from Theobal's Walk in Clerkenwell down to Temple Gardens on the Thames embankment. Near Lincoln's Inn on the south are Middle and Inner Temples, with the old church of the Knights Templar, built in 1185, near which is the plain tomb of Oliver Goldsmith, and opposite the building where Johnson and Goldsmith lived in very humble circumstances, and where Blackstone wrote his celebrated commentaries. Attached to these piles of law buildings are the gardens above mentioned, about three acres in extent, prettily laid out, to which the public are admitted on summer evenings between six and nine o'clock "to walk in a spot whence originated (according to Shakespeare) the Wars of the Roses." In the Middle Temple there stands a hall where is the only edifice now in existence in which a play of Shakespeare was acted in the poet's lifetime—the play was Twelfth Night. Not a stone's throw from the temple are the houses where Peter the Great lodged, and where William Penn lived. Another of these abodes of lawyers is Gray's Inn, which is north of Lincoln's Inn Fields. The chief entrance is from Holborn by a gateway erected in 1592. Lord Bacon had chambers in this inn. His celebrated essays are dated from "My chamber at Graie's Inn." After his disgrace he returned to his old chambers, and was residing here at the time of his death. In Gray's Inn gardens, which were laid out when Francis Bacon was treasurer of the inn, is a catalpa tree, cuttings of which are much sought after, for it is asserted that it is raised from a tree planted by Bacon. It was in Staple Inn, a dependency of Gray's Inn, that Dr. Johnson wrote his "Idler," in 1759. It will be recollected, too, that Justice Shallow" was one of Clement's Inn (a dependency of the Inner Temple), where Falstaff remembered him "like a man made after supper of a cheese-paring." Across the way from the Inner Temple is the Old Cock tavern only one story high and begrimmed with the age of centuries, a place made memorable in verse by Tennyson. Near by is the site of the house of good old Isaac Walton, of fisherman fame. In this vicinity stands the palace structure where Henry VII made headquarters on procession days. Almost next door to the last is the Ben Jonson tavern, where "Rare Ben" and Shakespeare were wont to meet at nights and consume their sack.

THE SIX GIRL PEDESTRIANS.

How They are Progressing in Their Tramp Through the Carolina Mountains.

From the Philadelphia Times.

HENDERSONVILLE, N. C., Aug. 12.—The six young girls who started out to walk across the mountains of this state, mentioned in these dispatches a few days ago, arrived at this place to-day. The girls are in excellent spirits, and, notwithstanding the fact that one of the youngest is footsore from the number of miles which they have tramped, they are thoroughly in earnest. The girls will remain here for a day or two to rest and recuperate. As soon as Miss Effie Bayliss recovers from her sore foot they will resume their journey. The girls are all badly sunburned and one or two somewhat freckled by their exposure to the rays of the sun. Even with these disadvantages they are quite attractive and greatly admired by the young men in the villages through which they have passed. The pedestrians have been on the road now about twenty days. During that time they have camped out four or five nights; once in a desolate forest in Surrey county. They were disturbed in their sleep on that occasion by some young bears that were wandering about. The girls had a short council of war and came to the conclusion that there was no cause for alarm.

Each of the fair tramps is armed with a small bowie-knife and revolver, and two of them look as if they were physically capable of taking care of themselves in an encounter with man or bear. Miss Bettie Dendar, who seems to be commander-in-chief of the party, says they have been kindly treated wherever they have stopped. Every house at which they have applied for lodging or food has been thrown open to them. Miss Dendar said that a few of the females whom they had met had manifested a disposition to give them the cold shoulder. These, however, the jolly little captain added, were invariably spinsters, who were fading into the age of the sere and yellow leaf. "Upon the whole," said Miss Dendar, "we have a splendid time, and though we have suffered some privations, we have been fully repaid for our trip. The country through which we have traveled is the most magnificent I ever saw. To-morrow or the day following we will resume our journey, directing our course toward the Bald mountains. We have no very definite programme, and expect to go where we choose or where the most picturesque scenery invites us." Two of the party are amateur painters, and two others have some little talent for sketching. All of the girls are dressed with a view to comfort and ease. They make ten or twelve miles a day without trouble. They do not expect to return from their trip before October 15.

Ezekiel Blaze is a meek man, but when he overtook his wife last week eloping with his neighbor Kalin, he spoke right out angrily: "It's mighty mean in ye, Kalin, t'r go and steal all the wife I had. I hope that ye'll have t'r live with her an' endure her tongue all yer born days." "Go it, Blaze; pitch inter him hard," said Dan Pelter, encouragingly. "I have," continued Blaze. "I knew I'd got t'r say somethin' to show that I've got the spirit of a man in my buzzum."—Exchange.

The Burlington (Vt.) Free Press has casually found in its files of a dozen years ago, an account of a little episode in the United States senate. Senator Conkling had interrupted Senator Edmunds in a speech on civil service reform with the supercilious remark that the senator from Vermont was fighting a windmill. "Certainly," replied Mr. Edmunds; "the senator from New York!" A "chuckle of appreciation," it is said, "ran through the senate."

METHODS OF DESTRUCTION, LAWFUL AND UNLAWFUL.

The Gentleman's Magazine.

It is curious to notice distinctions on naval warfare between lawful and unlawful methods, similar to those conspicuous on land. Such projects as bits of iron ore, pointed stones, nails, or glass, are excluded from the list of things that may be used in good war, and the declaration of St. Petersburg condemns explosive bullets as much on one element as on the other. Unfounded charges by one belligerent against another are, however, always liable to bring the illicit method into actual use on both sides, under the pretext of reprisals, as we see in the following order of the day, issued at Brest by the French vice admiral, Marshal Conflans, November 8, 1759: "It is absolutely contrary to the law of nations to make bad war, and to shoot shells at the enemy, who must always be fought according to the rules of honor, with the arms generally employed by polite nations. Yet some captains have complained that the English have used such weapons against them. It is, therefore, only on these complaints, and with extreme reluctance, that it has been resolved to embark hollow shells on vessels of the Line, but is expressly forbidden to use them unless the enemy begin." So the English in their turn charged the French with making bad war. The wound received by Nelson at Aboukir, on the forehead, was attributed to a piece of iron or a langridge shot. And the wounds that the crews of the Brunswick received from the Vengeur, in the famous battle between the French and English fleets in June, 1794, are said to have been peculiarly distressing, owing to the French employing langridge shot of raw ore and old nails and to their throwing stinkpots into the portholes, which caused most painful burnings and scaldings. It is safest to discredit such accusations altogether, for there is no limit to the barbarities that may come into play, in consequence of too ready a credulity. Redhot shot, legit mate for the defense of land forts against ships, used not to be considered good war in the contests of ships with one another. In the three hours' action between the Lively and the Tourterelle, a French privateer, the use by the latter of hot shot, "not usually deemed honorable warfare," was considered to be wrong, but a wrong on the part of those who equipped her for sea more than on the part of the captain who fired them. The English assailing batteries that fired redhot shot against Gluckstadt, in 1813, are said to have resorted to "a mode of warfare very unusual with us since the siege of Gibraltar." The "Treatise on Tactics," by the Emperor Leo VI, carries back the record of the means employed against an enemy in naval warfare to the ninth century. The things he recommends as most effective are: Cranes, to let fall heavy weights on the enemy's decks; caltrops, with iron spikes, to wound his feet; jars full of quicklime, to suffocate him; jars containing combustibles, to burn him; jars containing poisonous reptiles, to bite him, and Greek fire, with its noise like thunder, to frighten as well as burn him. Many of these methods were of immemorial usage, for Scipio knew the merits of jars full of pitch, and Hannibal of jars full of vipers. Nothing was too bad for use in those days, nor can it be ascertained when and why they ceased to be used. Greek fire was used with great effect in the sea battles between the Saracens and Christians, but it is a fair cause of wonder that the invention of gunpowder should have so entirely superseded it as to cause its very manufacture to have been forgotten. Neither does history record the date of, nor the reason for, the disuse of quicklime, which, in the famous fight off Dover in 1217, between the French and English, contributed so greatly to the victory of the latter.

THE GREATEST CITY OF EGYPT.

Cairo the Most Perfect Example of a Mohammedan Capital.

London Daily News.

The ordinary population of Cairo is nearly twice as large as that of the great Egyptian port which has, we may almost say, passed out of existence with a swiftness so dramatic and so terrible. The extent of its streets, squares, and other public places is even more than proportionately greater. This famous city, now familiar to so many travelers and holiday tourists, is the largest city in Africa. It occupies a site upon a spur of the Mokattam hills and the plain below, of about ten miles in circuit, of oblong shape, comprising within that space more than three square miles inclusive of the new and fashionable quarter of Ismailia. It is bordered on the western side by the Nile, which, with the contracted channels formed by the Islands of Rhoda and Boolak, flows along under the walls of the palaces of Kasr and Ibrahim Pasha. Behind the city to the east is the lofty range of hills of Mokattam and El Josheo, flanked by the citadel, which commands a magnificent view of Cairo and the Nile, with the arid plains of Ghizeh and the Pyramids in the distance.

Mr. Stanley Lane Poole considers the city "the most perfect example the world can show of a Mohammedan capital." In spite of the Haussmanizing tendencies of recent days, and the attempts to raise it to the questionable dignity of a bastard Paris, observes this experienced orientalist, "we can still shut our eyes to the hotels and restaurants, the dusty grass plots and tawdry villa residences, and turn away to wander in the labyrinth of narrow lanes which intersect the old parts just as they did in the golden days of the Memluk sultans.

Cairo is what Alexandria has long ceased to be, a city, which, if it no longer justifies the exclamation of the Jewish physician in the "Thousand and One Nights," "He who has not seen Cairo hath not seen the world" is yet essentially Mohammedan. Its peculiar boast is its mosques and chapels, of which, there are said to be as many as 400, some of them fine specimens of Arabian architecture—the most celebrated being the mosque of Sultan Hassan, which has a magnificent entrance beautifully embellished with honeycomb tracery. In the poorer quarters the houses are built of mud or sun-dried bricks, and are only one story in height; those of the richer class are of brick, wood, and a soft stone quarried in the neighboring mountains, and are two, or frequently three stories high.

Broader streets with loftier houses, however, have arisen since the accession of the Khedive Ismail, particularly in the neighborhood of the Esbeekeyah, that large public square, once the bed of a lake, flanked with trees around public promenades, with large and handsome fountains, and bordered with cafes, shops, hotels, and some buildings of a nobler character, as the old palace of Mahomet Ali, the opera house, and the French theater. This centre of the European life of the city is on the northern side, about a third of a mile from the Ismailia canal. Hereabouts are concentrated the English, French, and German consulates, and the American mission. At the eastern corner are the post and telegraph offices; a little further to the north are Miss Whateley's schools.

The collection of streets called the Gemayleeve, where the wholesale business of Cairo is done, and the quarter which is the center of the Red sea trade, lie away from the European quarter to the east. The most important of the new streets is the Boulevard Mahomet Ali, which traverses the city in a northeasterly direction from the Esbeekeyah to the citadel.

The climate of Cairo is considered healthy in the winter months, when the thermometer seldom falls below 40 deg. Fahrenheit, or rises above 70 deg.; but damp, unwholesome exhalations prevail after the July rising of the Nile has subsided; and the heat in August, reaching an average of 86 deg., is oppressive for Europeans.

Freaks of Juries.

London Truth.

Shiel, in his inimitable sketches of the Irish bar, tells of the verdict of a Clare jury, in a case of "felonious gallantry." They acquitted the prisoner of the capital charge, but found him guilty of a "great undecency." R. Shelton Mackenzie, in his notes to Shiel's text, says: "This is nothing to the verdict of a Welsh jury: 'Not guilty—but we recommend him not to do it again.'" Mackenzie also relates that an English jury, not very bright, having a prisoner before them charged with burglary, being unwilling to convict him capitally, as no personal violence accompanied the robbery, gave him the safe verdict: "Guilty of getting out of the window." He adds that the most original was that of an Irish jury before whom a prisoner pleaded guilty, throwing himself on the mercy of the court. The verdict was, "Not guilty." The judge, in surprise, exclaimed: "Why, he has confessed his crime!" The foreman responded, "Ah my lord, you do not know that fellow; but we do. He is the most notorious liar in the country, and no twelve men who know his character can believe a word he says." And the jurors adhering to their verdict, the "liar" escaped.

Sellwood.

A Beautiful Suburban Town on the East Shore of the Willamette.

The Best Opportunity of the Time for a Home.

The streets and avenues of this beautiful site are being rapidly cleared, and lots and blocks are now ready for sale.

Its Advantages to Residents

Are rapid and direct ferry communication with the city, almost level and easily cleared ground, good soil, and the facility for furnishing pure water.

The Steam Ferry

Which the company guarantees for two years, will in a pleasant ride of twenty minutes, land you where you can buy a lot for one tenth the sum asked for one in twenty minutes' walk from the business center of Portland; and in the spring, when the large and swift steamer for which the Company is negotiating is put on, the trip will be reduced to fifteen minutes each way, at the nominal fare of five cents.

Other Means of Access.

No other site near Portland has been improved so lavishly by its proprietors as Sellwood, for the convenience of purchasers and residents. Streets have been opened and cleared, and a plank road from the river to the railroad station at Willsburg is projected, and grading and planking of part of it has been ordered this year, connecting, by a ferry soon to be put on, with Fulton and the macadam road. This road will also cross the East Portland and Oregon City road, so that means of access by railroads, steamer and wagon roads will be unequaled.

Pure Spring Water.

As soon as a sufficient number of lots have been sold to justify it, the best of spring water will be brought through the town, the creek which crosses the eastern length of the site furnishing ample power for the purpose.

The Sellwood Ferry Guaranteed.

At a meeting of the Board of Directors of the Sellwood Real Estate Co., held August 21, 1882, the following resolution was adopted:

"RESOLVED, That the Sellwood Real Estate Company hereby guarantee that they will keep a Ferry in operation between the town of Sellwood and Portland at present prices to residents of Sellwood for a period of two years, except when unavoidable accidents cause temporary suspension."

F. C. Goodin, Sec'y. H. L. Pittock, President.

Prices of Lots.

Payable in monthly installments of $10 each.

Corner lots in blocks 1 to 12, $200; inside lots $150.

Corner lots in blocks 13 to 32, 170; inside lots 130.

Corner lots in blocks 32 to 112, 130; inside lots 100.

Ten per cent. discount made to the purchaser of a block.

THE BARLOW ROAD.

THE MT. HOOD AND BARLOW ROAD COMpany having recently purchased the franchise of the "Old Barlow Road Company," announce that their road across the Cascade Mountains is open for all kinds of travel. The company having constructed a branch road from Sandy P. O. to the Toll Gate on the south bank of the river Sandy, the travel will be able to avoid the long, tedious route over the "Devil's Back Bone" and the five miles of heavy sand on the old road.

The bridges are all in good repair, and all the heavy hills are graded. The company are spending large amounts of money on the road, and will spare no pains nor expense in maintaining it as the best road over the Cascade Mountains in this state. Supply stations with provisions at the Toll Gate, Summit Prairie and White River. Tolls reasonable.

VENUS AND ADONIS.

How a Victorious Maiden's Curiosity was Satisfied.

[illegible]

An incident of some interest is related in the [illegible] Republican by a gentleman of veracity, as occurring at one of our mountain lakes recently. A lovely maiden who was the pride of home and parent in a neighboring town concluded to go away from the dust and bustle of the village and spend a few weeks in the shade of the mountainous woods, lured by the pellucid waters of the quiet lake and surrounded by the grand and romantic mountains. The fond parents sent her in charge of an antiquated maiden aunt, [illegible]. Only a few days elapsed before a fair Adonis stepped along who was ripe for a conquest. His enamored glances fell on the unwary Venus, and reciprocal affection soon came into their hearts. They soon began the habit of taking long walks through the grove in each other's company. No matter how hot the day or disagreeable the weather, they took their daily walk in the same direction and were always particular to see that no one was watching them. To the lynx-eyed old maiden aunt, this was gall and wormwood. Something must be wrong. It was highly reprehensible, in her opinion, for a young man and woman to be constantly in each other's company without the sight and hearing of others. She resolved on vengeance. On an occasion fixed and appointed by herself, she proceeded cautiously down the lane usually pursued by the lovers, and, hiding herself behind some bushes, waited till they proceeded by her. Not far from the spot was a little lake or pond, forming a beautiful little nook, and surrounded to the water's edge by thick bushes and trees. Towards this Venus and Adonis had trudged. As the untarnished maiden of many years approached it she was surprised to hear the loud and merry ring of laughter, the splashing of water, and the shouts of glee and merrymaking. She silently and cautiously made an opening through the thicket, which commanded a full view of the pond. Heavens and earth! what a sight met her horrified gaze. She stood riveted to the spot in dumb amazement and horror! Her eyes surely deceived her, and her hair almost stood on end! There was "Venus rising from the sea" in all her pristine vigor and denuded beauty. There was Adonis also, untrammelled by the frail habiliments of art, which are commonly supplied by the ingenuity of man. They were robed in nothing that nature had not supplied, which seemed to be quite sufficient on the occasion owing to the heated state of the weather. Adonis was spattering water over his beloved Venus in a playful and childlike manner, and she was laughing and chattering as merrily as if she was in the fashionable throng of the ball room—in fact they had gone in swimming, and seemed to be enjoying the sport in a right royal manner. The old maiden aunt smothered her righteous indignation for the time and silently stole away. A short time afterwards the truant couple came tripping toward the hotel and were as lively and social as any in the throng. A marriage is likely to end the romance.

Is She a Model Woman or Is She a Fool?

The best natured woman in the United States lives in Austria. She has been married a number of years to a man named Ferguson, but she and her husband have never had a quarrel yet, and he has frequently boasted that it is utterly impossible to make her angry. Ferguson made several desperate attempts to see if he could not exasperate her to look cross or scowl at him, merely to gratify his curiosity, but the more outrageously he acted, the more affable and loving she behaved.

Last week he was talking to a friend about what a hard time he had trying to find out if his wife had a temper. The friend offered to bet $50 that if Ferguson were to go home drunk, raise a row, and pull the table cloth full of dishes off the table she would show some signs of annoyance. Ferguson said he didn't want to rob his friend of his money, for he knew he would win; but they at last made the bet of $50, the friend to hide in the front yard and watch the proceedings of the convention through the window.

Ferguson came home late, and apparently fighting drunk. She met him at the gate, kissed him, and assisted his tottering steps to the house. He sat down hard in the middle of the floor, and howled out:

"Confound your ugly picture, what did you mean by pulling that chair from under me?"

"Oh, I hope you didn't hurt yourself. It is my awkwardness, but I'll try and not do it again," and she helped him to his feet, although she had nothing in the world to do with his falling.

He then sat down on the sofa, and sliding off on the floor, abused her like a pickpocket for lifting up the other end of the sofa, all of which she took good naturedly, and finally she led him to the supper table. He threw a plate at her, but she acted as if she did not notice it, and asked him if he would take tea or coffee. Then the brute seized the tablecloth and sat down on the floor, pulling the dishes and everything else over with him in one grand crash.

What did this noble woman do? Do you suppose she grumbled and talked about going home to her ma, or that she sat down and cried like a fool, or that she sulked or pouted? Not a bit of it. With a pleasant smile she said:

"Why, George, that's a new idea, ain't it? We have been married ten years and have never yet ate our supper on the floor. Won't it be fun—just like those picnics we used to go to before we were married?" And then this angelic woman deliberately sat down on the floor alongside of the wretch, arranged the dishes, and fixed him up a nice supper.

This broke George all up. He owned up he was only fooling her, and offered to give her the $50 to get her a new hat, but she took the money and bought him a new suit of clothes and a box of cigars.—Galveston News.

LITERARY NOTES.

A work on the brain by Swedenburg, which for 140 years has lain unnoticed in the library of the royal academy of Stockholm, has just been translated into the English by Professor Tafel.

The spelling reformers are gradually approaching unity. The "partial corrections" of the English Philological Society are being adopted in this country, and the English Spelling Reform Association has adopted the American "five rules," which are substantially contained in the partial corrections.

Professor George Ebers complains that no less than three of his novels have been dramatized and put upon the stage in various towns of Germany without his consent. The German law on the subject seems to be similar to that of England, but a petition to the reichstag for its amendment is now being circulated.

Over two thousand volumes from the library of the late George Henry Lewes, comprising philosophical and scientific works, have been placed by his son, Charles Lewes, in Dr. Williams' library, in Grafton street, where they will be known as the "George Henry Lewes Library," and will be available to special students.

The Athenæum is authority for the statement that the Maine Historical Society has decided to publish a history of that state. It is now fifty years since Williamson's history was issued, and much new material has been discovered in recent days. One of the problems yet to be solved is whether the Spaniards occupied that region between 1575 and 1589, and a special search has been instituted in the Spanish archives to clear up the doubts on this head.

The Roman Catholic publishers have united in a circular letter to the archbishops, bishops and clergy of the Roman church and the heads of religious institutions in the United States, in which they not only announce a reduction in the prices of books suitable for circulation in their parish libraries, but bitterly lament the want of interest in denominational literature within the circle of their communion. With all the increase in the number of Roman Catholics hardly half as many books are now sold as were sold twenty years ago.

Hon. Robert T. Lincoln, secretary of war, is avenging the slight heaped twenty years ago upon little Bob Lincoln, the president's meddlesome son, [illegible]. On several occasions during his father's administration, he assumed toward the war office the air of a prince, and was several times snubbed by the officers in a way most humiliating to youthful vanity. Now he orders Howard here, and Schofield there, [illegible], and hugely enjoys their [illegible].

SOLDIERS UNDER FIRE.

Few men, very few men, go into action for the first time without thinking [illegible] they were safe the second time they [illegible] they remember the last time when [illegible] it unhurt, and they think [illegible] battle and more of the work before them [illegible] on the former day. Take an instance from the late war against the Zulus, when we had [illegible] soldiers with only a sprinkling of old [illegible]. There is no need here to tell the old tale of the mighty sweep of the stampede [illegible] the terror [illegible] when a Zulu was [illegible]. A [illegible] with distant foes, and the [illegible] look how we are falling [illegible] look, the Zulus are after him. These and a thousand other instances were but the natural outcome of ignorance. [illegible] suddenly called upon to face something which existed only in their imagination, and as such was pictured in the blackest colors. But at [illegible], where the Zulus [illegible] the square in thousands with the sun shining on them, our men saw that they were only [illegible] like themselves after all, and blazed away merrily into the [illegible] of them, obeying the words of command just as they used to do at Aldershot, with the [illegible] cartridges blowing off their [illegible] a vast change in feeling. Henceforth they knew that the rifles they carried were not mere toys to make a noise with, and they learned that it was a useful thing for themselves if they obeyed their officers. They had seen a group of twenty or more Zulus creep into a bush in front of them, and by a well-timed volley disappear, and they remembered that it was their officer who had told them to fire that volley. Without his direction they would have potted away, and the Zulus would have potted back, for all they knew, till to-morrow, or the day after. And from that time on there were no more scares. So much for the apprenticeship stage. Now this stage is over, and the young soldier knows as much about fighting as the old one, with all that buoyancy of youth added to back him up, and so the value of the men is no longer equal. It has been the writer's good fortune lately to have seen a good deal of real hard fighting, with men under him who had learned their apprenticeship to fire thoroughly; and what has he seen, not once, but repeatedly, in action? He has seen the old soldier breathless, always in a hurry, stumbling when he might have walked straight, not showing coward-ice, but with his head gone, and fingers too nervous to stick up the sight of his rifle. While in the same action, he has seen the boy-soldiers' faces lit up with anxiety, looking up at his, listening for the word of command, moving hastily, but always under check, and never hesitating when it was an advance that was called for. One fat boy, under twenty, belonging to a [illegible] civil department, and [illegible] out on the sly, he remembers well. He had a fat face, very placid, with round eyes, sheep-like in expression, in no way heroic (or flashing fire, as youths' eyes do in pictures of battle-fields), and this fat boy kept close to him all the time when the firing was hottest. Whenever he looked down he found himself looking into the depths of his placid eyes, which asked, quite unmistakably, what "sight" he should put up to the rifle he grasped on his knee below them. Now and then he gave him what he thought was the distance, when he adjusted the bar as methodically as if on parade, turning it sideways to see if the line corresponded exactly with the figures, and then, raising it as coolly as ever, gently delivered his fire and returned to the "ready" position.—Blackwood's Magazine.

Canonchet, the Sprague Villa.

Canonchet, the villa of ex-Gov. Sprague, lately bought on speculation by Francis H. Moulton for $62,250, is said to have cost not less than $1,000,000. The house was originally the property of Governor Atwood Robinson, when it was surrounded by a plantation of from 2000 to 3000 acres, cultivated by the slaves belonging to the owner. William Sprague, when he became the husband of Kate Chase, gave her liberty to convert it into a villa, but stipulated that the old building should not be disturbed as to its roof and walls. The bills incurred by her orders amounted to $635,000. She added four towers, and sixty rooms were provided for, and when she was not half done the building had become such a labyrinth that an architect was employed in making plans for each floor, which were framed and hung up to guide persons in their wanderings. A grand staircase cost $30,000; a library on the second floor cost $10,000; but her plans were unfinished when the financial crash came. There is a gorgeous apartment, floored with polished marble, and having a dismantled fountain in the centre. This was designed as a music room, with spaces for six pianos. The fresco painters had outlined a beautiful design, illustrating the chase of a butterfly by boys, and it was partly worked out. When the crash came they dropped the paint pots upon the floor, and they remain there. The room is a splendid ruin.

The parlors were never finished, though satin, costing $12 a yard, lined the walls. Electric bells are scattered through the house; there are splendid chandeliers, but no gas; a telegraph office, where an operator was kept during the summer months, when, at one time, fifty guests and thirty servants spent merry days at the expense of the host, who now keeps a loaded shotgun resting on a carved mantel upheld by figures of mermaids. Surprises await the visitor in the house. Up in one tower where nothing is expected is a beautiful little room in Pompeiian red, spangled with gold, where meals for two were served. On the first floor is the room for a page, whose duty it was to attend at the door, to keep the cards of visitors neatly arranged, and keep up a book of addresses of Mrs. Sprague's friends. An occasional lady friend has, in visiting the place, put a check to the ruin and the loss by having the rich carpets moved from beneath the leaks, and securing the silverware found behind books in closets, and even in the grass on the lawn. Much of the furniture has been boxed up and sent away from Canonchet, and much remains.

Amid these scenes of decay ex-Gov. Sprague and his boy Willie have lived for several years in solitude, broken by great excitement as the officers of the law have come about the place. What its ultimate fate will be is uncertain, as the legality of the late sale will probably be disputed, either by ex-Gov. Sprague or his creditors. It has often been talked of as a grand club house, and again as a gambling house and cafe for millionaires. The landscape about it is in its primitive state. Two hundred acres of it are made up of a salt marsh, with an inlet from the sea. Mrs. Sprague expected that her husband would build ornamental stables and adorn the grounds, but he never did. There is not yet a setting for the costly and odd jewel. The future of the place is apt to be a part of the summer life at Narragansett.

American Potteries.

N. Y. Tribune.

The tariff commission made last week a thorough inspection of the potteries at Trenton, New Jersey, of which there are twenty-five, whose output is said to be greater than that of all other American potteries combined. The object of the manufacturers in inviting this inspection was to obtain a still higher protective tariff than the present rate of 40 per cent on common ware and 50 per cent. on decorated ware. They claim that even the present tariff has reduced the price of porcelain one-third below that of twenty years ago. One of them made a statement so amazing as to be almost incredible, to the effect that the state of New Jersey uses more porcelain ware than Asia, Africa and South America combined. The porcelain manufactured and used by the Chinese and Jerseymen are of such different qualities as scarcely to deserve the same name. The wares turned out of these Trenton potteries, however, are so admirable in material and finish that they deserve hearty encouragement. The American keenness of insight and promptness of adaptation were never more forcibly shown than in the work done by them and by one or two potteries nearer Philadelphia, in which the Palissy idea has been followed with remarkable success. It was of these Trenton potteries that Soden Smith, of the South Kensington museum, told a suggestive story on his return to England. A party of workmen from them visited the exposition in Philadelphia, and happened to fall in his way. He went with them through several exhibits of pottery, being interested by their quiet, quick intelligence. One vase of a ware unknown to them he showed them, explaining minutely the method of handling the paste, decoration, burning, etc. They asked a few pertinent questions, examined it minutely and returned home. Three weeks later a vase was sent to him from them, so careful an imitation of the original that he was startled. "I understood then," he said, "for the first time, why the Americans succeed." The American potteries, small as they now are compared with their future possibilities, already give employment to thousands of workmen and women, decorators, designers, etc., as well as those of lower grade, who would otherwise find no market for their skill or talent.

Something About Lawyers.

N. Y. World.

The American Bar Association ought to have continued in session to receive and to consider at its banquet the August Fortnightly Review, in which Mr. Freeman, in his paper entitled "Impressions of America," severely remarks: "In matters of legal history, there are some American lawyers who have made their way on to the firm ground occupied by historians like Stubbs and Maine." Whereupon the Pall Mall Gazette rather sharply observes: "Some of our brethren on the other side have not only made their way to the 'firm ground,' but are making notable advances of their own upon it, and unless our teachers and students look to it earnestly and speedily English lawyers are in danger of being left far behind by the Americans in what ought to be especially their own business." The Pall Mall might have added that the shelves of English law booksellers abound with revamped and reedited volumes by American lawyers who are not always credited with the authorship of their own books on the title pages. There is, however, one characteristic of the English bar which in contrast with the long harangues in the Guiteau, Malley and star route cases might be judiciously imitated here. This is the English habit of omitting rhetorical padding from pleadings before judges and juries and dealing alone with salient points.

Marriage in High Life.

[illegible] Gazette.

His Majesty, Winnemucca MDLV., king of all the Piutes, was recently married to a princess of his tribe. Buena Vista John, a trusted member of Winnemucca's cabinet, tells the Silver State that the royal consort is past the middle age and weighs all the same as four sacks of flour. Winnemucca, who traces his lineage, according to Piute tradition, from the time when Humboldt valley was a lake, is said to be the [illegible] monarch of his line. He has children past the prime of life, and the old fellow takes a new wife to provide for his [illegible] old age. The Piute marriage ceremony is a very simple affair. The chosen bride retires to the wickiup at an appointed time and huddles in a corner. If she does not like the bridegroom she gets up and runs away when he enters the wickiup, but if he is the man of her choice she remains and becomes his slave for life. The old king will have an easier time than has been his lot for years past, as the queen will [illegible] the aged monarch.

It was a misfortune for which the people of Chicago should not be held responsible, says the Chicago Tribune, that yesterday's demonstration in honor of the widow of John Brown resulted in a discreditable failure because of the inefficient and unworthy hands into which the management of the affair chanced to fall. Chicago has nothing but respect and veneration for the grand historic name borne by Mrs. John Brown, and the wretched mismanagement of yesterday will cause general regret.

MR. COX'S WILD ELOQUENCE.

The Sort of Matter that keeps the Government Printers Busy.

The last issue of the Congressional Record for the recent session contains a speech from Mr. S. S. Cox on the persecution of the Jews in Russia. Mr. Cox, after reviewing eloquently the atrocities perpetrated on the Jews in Russia and furnishing a statistical table and a good deal of matter to his remarks, concludes with an appeal for more and general sympathy from America. [illegible] the Czar, [illegible] to the Nazarene [illegible] people in the western world who have [illegible] the barbarities of Russia and the [illegible] power [illegible] palace and pleasures of Petersburg, where the haunted czar hides from his loving children, that the democracy of America demands a new and better evangel than that of blood and bigotry. By the sacred memories of our own religious and the liberality of our established order, by the associations which cluster like stars around the sacred mountains of Moriah, Hermon, Hor, Pisgah, Horeb, Carmel, Lebanon, Tabor and Zion—as, even of Calvary and Olivet—let us remember the children of that Israel whose faith was given for the 'healing of the nations,' and whose mystic voice spoke from the mount of God in the blue Horeb, where the banished seer beheld the heavenly Jerusalem with its walls of jasper and gates of pearl standing open day and night, and crowned by its temple of beauty and light. And shall this vision never have realization? This people is the sole survivor, next to Egypt, China, and India, of the infancy of mankind. It is at the mercy of the cruel despot of the north. With a lineage unrivaled for purity, a religious sentiment and ethics drawn out of the glory and greatness of Mount Sinai, a ceremony as magnificent as the temple of the wise king who enshrined Jehovah with in its adytum and prayed as never human spirit prayed for the stranger in the land—with an eternal influence from its lawgivers, prophets, and psalmists never vouchsafed to any language, race or creed; it outlived the philosophies of Greece and the grandeur and power of Rome. It is this race, broken, beaten and scattered, to whom this czar of all the Russias adds the enormities of his rule upon the victims of the ignorance and slander of the ages. The birthright of this race is thus despoiled, and we, sir, have no word of protest. Struggling against adversities which no other people ever encountered, they yet survive the wine from the crushed grape. Champions of Jehovah! how have I gazed at ye within your own gates at the very base of your grand house of the Lord and gate of Heaven, and hear your wailing because of the destruction of the fair city of your love! With what pleading for the restoration of your own Jerusalem have not the Cyclopean stones echoed! How long, O Lord, how long shall rapacity and bigotry despoil this people? Let the dawn come to the children of the wandering foot and weary heart, waiting, waiting for that morning which will give them its auroral glory and its cheerful beatitudes."

DEMAND FOR CELESTIALS.

No More Chinamen for Hawaii—Why Celestials Cling to California.

San Francisco Examiner.

An order for 100 Chinese peons was lately received from the Sandwich Islands with instructions to offer each serf $15 per month and pay two months in advance. The agent who received the offer went immediately to an officer of one of the six companies to try to fill it, but found that the company applied to would not contract for any labor with the islands. He then went to several of the companies and received the same reply. The celestial "bosses" do not seem desirous of having their peons leave the Pacific coast for plantation-work, where the pay is small and the death-rate large. The latter dread is really the cause of the six companies acting in the manner stated. A year ago all the Chinese laborers wanted for the islands could be procured at $12 per month and two months in advance; but during the past twelve months there has been a heavy immigration of Celestials from California, some going further north, others going east and south, and thousands departing for China, never to return. The agent referred to told the Examiner reporter that a Chinese merchant informed him that there were fully 10,000 less Chinamen in California to-day than there were a year ago. He also stated that a proportionate decrease would continue. Most of the Chinese who have saved enough to live comfortably in China, and this did not not take a great deal, would go home as fast as they could. As to the Chinese labor market, as it stands at present, there is, in reality, a scarcity of hands. Farming operations have called for a great many, and the new railroads being constructed in Oregon and Washington territory, British Columbia, and elsewhere north, will take all the Chinese they can get.

It is not generally known that the Chinese are in one sense as religious as are Anglo-Saxon races, and that they like to be as near to their Josh houses as possible, just as Christian people like to be where there are churches. The Celestial is an ardent Josh worshiper; but he likes to do that worship in a few days during the year. For this stated time he is almost fanatical in his religious devotions. The Chinese in California have ample opportunities of this kind, and hence they hate to leave this state for the wild regions of the north. Indeed, when the Chinaman can control his own actions, which is rare, he prefers smaller wages if he can only be near a Josh house. Another reason why the Celestial likes California lies in the fact that he can more easily procure his opium drug, for which he has an inordinate passion, than is possible in the northern regions, where it is scarce and sold at a much higher price than here. John is also a gambler by nature, and lotteries and tan games abound for him in San Francisco. Another factor in the Celestial's liking for the Golden state is that Chinawomen of a certain class are plentiful in this city, while they are scarce outside of it. John is as capable of making a fool of himself about a woman as is the most refined and esthetic Caucasian philosopher. Human nature is human nature.

The Author of "Rab and His Friends."

Entering life as a physician, Dr. Brown in time obtained a practice moderate in range, but of a peculiar kind. To each family which he attended he could not come merely as a medical functionary, feeling their pulses and writing out prescriptions; but he must visit them as a friend, entering into their joys, their cares and their sorrows, and giving them the full sympathy of his most tender heart. To his patients this was soothing and delightful; but to himself, it involved a heavy draught on his sensitive spirit. When to any of these families calamity or death came, he took it to himself as a domestic affliction. But even when most sorely tried, he kept his troubles to himself and gave the world his sunshine. As he left his house and walked along Princes street, with nods and greetings, his presence was felt like a passing sunbeam by old and young alike. When he entered a room where a conclave of grave directors were met for business each cased in that armor of self-defense and vigilance which men on such occasions will put on, at one remark from Dr. Brown, in which good sense, kindliness and humor were blended, the armor of priggishness fell off—one touch of nature had made all kin—and they went about the work in hand restored to their natural selves. No house he visited but the humble servant there knew him, and for each there was a gentle look or a kind word of recognition, touched with humor.

An altogether peculiar and delightful personality, a nature in which the elements were most kindly mixed, a spirit finely touched, and to fine issues—all this his familiar circle had long known, but the world did not know it, till Dr. Brown had reached his eight-and-fortieth year. Then the appearance of "Rab and his Friends" revealed it. Men and women everywhere were thrilled as they had never been before—few could read it dry-eyed, even when alone—hard-nerved men they be who would venture to read it aloud. Brief as the story is, and simple as its outlines, it was felt that Scotland produced nothing like it, nothing so full of pure, pathetic genius, since the pen dropped from the hand of Scott. So long—nearly fifty years—he had kept silence, observing, reading, thinking, feeling, but speaking no word in print. Like a still mountain loch on a calm autumn day, that receives into its bosom the surrounding hills, pearly clouds and blue sky, and renders all back more beautiful than they are, his mind had been taking in all the influences of nature, all impressions of men and manners that he saw, and of the finest poetry and literature that he read, and now the time was come when he must reproduce something of these, mellowed and refined by his own beautifying personality, which has a magic touch that makes him free to hearts and affections most unlike his own. He had, beyond other men, the true insight which sympathy gives. Keenly discriminative of character, he read the men he met to their inmost core, but with such forbearance, such large charity, that although he saw clearly their foibles and faults, he took hold of them on the kindly side, saw the humorousness of them, passed them by, if possible, with a joke, and was not stirred to hatred or satire. His was too fine a nature, too wise, too sympathetic to be confined within any bounds of politics or sect. His friendship overleapt all such limits, and included men of every party and church. But the race of divines from which he came left with him their goodness, and nothing of their narrowness. The darker features of the ancestral creed fell into the shade, but the essence remained. A strong background of reverence, devoutness and humbleness to God and Christ were the support of his life.—Spectator.

New and Stale Bread.

The famous Leipsic physician, Prof. Reclam, in a recent number of the Gesundheit, has ventured to say a good word on behalf of newly baked bread. The majority of the [illegible] people, dyspeptics and hypochondriacs, he observes, say that they can only eat stale bread, that they find new bread too indigest[ible]. The victory he tells them, is not in the stale[ness] of the bread, but in the care and thoroughness with which they are compelled to masticate it, on account of its hardness. The tongue not only deceives the human race in speaking, says the learned physician, it is a great deceiver in eating. As soon as the tongue perceives that any morsel in our mouth is soft and yielding, we are persuaded that it may safely be swallowed. No labor or labor is spent upon its mastication. Hence so many people declare that sauerkraut, sour cakes, pate de foie gras, veal and other favorite delicacies of the Teuton do not agree with them. The professor declares that none of these are actually indigestible in themselves. As with new bread, it is the ease with which they are swallowed which makes them indigestible.

Stale bread and hard biscuit, on the other hand, are not of themselves inherently digestible; but they give the eater so much trouble to soften them that they are not swallowed until they have been reduced to a fit condition for that process. Hence the stomach has not that trouble with them which it [illegible] has with the softer and more [illegible] which has never received more than [illegible] with the teeth. Rapid eating and insufficient chewing are the two worst foes of the [illegible], says [illegible] persons to trans[illegible] the habit of [illegible]
